Inaccurate and deliberate loose account of incidents with intention mislead readers on social media should be consider fake news. The consequences of such "lies" can cause distress and embarrassment to victim, tainting victim's reputation and promote further online bashings.

Recently someone gave an inaccurate account of events with the intention to teach me a lesson on facebook/whatsapp, as I was inactive on social media to clarify, the offending post later generated insults and name callings on me.

I hope the committee will consider - providing missing or loose information, creating assumptions, be it intention or not, as an offence. Counter measures can include holding social media platform owners/administrators/moderators responsible altogether. We need to ensure platform owner & person(s) be very responsible for posting a story that is accurate and truthful.
