passengers boarding a flight at the airport. A sees Z, a passenger queuing up to be screened, acting suspiciously. As A approaches Z, Z suddenly shouts aloud that he is carrying a bomb and warns A not to approach further. As A draws his revolver, Z suddenly starts to run away. A, after 10 assessing the circumstances of the case, and to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith, believes that Z has a bomb and will set it off. A shoots Z and Z dies as a result. A has committed no offence, even though it may turn out that Z was not carrying a bomb.

15 (c) A, a police officer, is deployed to perform patrol duty at an underground train station. A receives information from police headquarters that someone is attempting to plant a bomb in the public transport system. The profile of the suspect is also provided. While patrolling the underground train station, A sees Z, who fits the profile. Z is seen carrying a backpack and behaving suspiciously. A approaches Z and 20 orders him to stop. Z suddenly starts running towards a crowd in the station. A, after assessing the circumstances of the case, and to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith, believes that Z has a bomb and will set it off. A shoots Z and Z dies as a result. A has committed no offence, even though it may turn out that Z was not carrying a bomb.

25 (d) X, the commander of a naval vessel, is patrolling Singapore territorial waters. X receives information that someone may hijack a vessel in order to commit a terrorist act. X spots vessel A which is proceeding at high speed towards a cruise liner. X orders vessel A to stop her manoeuvre immediately and fires a warning signal. Vessel A instead circumstances of the case, and to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith, believes that vessel A is going to ram into the cruise liner. X gives an order to fire at vessel A. The persons on board vessel A die as a result.

X has committed no offence, even though it may turn out that vessel A was 35 not hijacked nor were there any terrorist on board.”.

40 “(c) X, the commander of a naval vessel, is deployed in response to a threat of a terrorist attack against a ferry terminal in Singapore. X receives information that vessel A, with a crew of 6, has been hijacked by terrorists and is approaching the ferry terminal at great speed and is likely to collide into the terminal. There is insufficient time to evacuate the persons at the terminal, which is estimated to be about 100. X orders vessel A to stop her manoeuvre immediately and fires a warning signal. However, vessel A continues her advance towards the terminal. Here, if X gives an order to fire at vessel A to disable it, without any intention to cause harm to the crew members of vessel A, and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the persons at the terminal, he is not guilty of an offence. This is so even though he knows that he is likely to cause harm to the crew members of vessel A, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which X intends to avoid is such as to excuse him in incurring the risk of firing at vessel A.”.

The Bill also seeks to make related and consequential amendments to certain other written laws.

Clause 1 relates to the short title and commencement.

Clause 2 inserts a new section 4 to allow for the prosecution of public servants who commit offences abroad in the course of their duties. The provision is necessary because in some cases where a public servant commits an offence abroad, the foreign country in which the offence is committed may not wish to prosecute because it has no interest in the prosecution of that public servant. The new section will enable the prosecution in Singapore of such a public servant. The new section is restricted to offences committed by public servants who are citizens or permanent residents of Singapore only if they commit offences in the course of, or if they purport to act in the course of, their employment. Public servants acting in the course of their employment are seen as representatives of the Government and the Government has an interest that they do not commit offences in the course of their duties, wherever they may be.

Vide an amendment to section 40, the word “offence” in the new section 4 refers to a thing punishable under the Code or under any other law for the time being in force. Therefore, if a public servant commits an offence under some written law other than the Code, provided that he is acting in the course of his employment, the new section will allow for his prosecution.

Clause 3 amends section 21 to redefine “public servant” to include a member of the Public Service Commission or the Legal Service Commission constituted under Part IX of the Constitution and to delete an obsolete reference.

Clause 4 amends section 27 to substitute the reference to “wife” with the gender neutral term “spouse”.

Clause 5 repeals and re-enacts section 29 to redefine “document” and to insert new definitions of “writing” and “electronic record”. The new definition of “document” includes any document in writing and certain specified types of material which are to be treated as documents. The new definition expands the existing definition by including discs, tapes, sound-tracks and other devices in which sounds or other data (not being visual images) are embodied so as to be capable of being reproduced therefrom. The new definition also includes films, negatives, tapes, discs and other devices in which one or more visual images are embodied so as to be capable of being reproduced therefrom. The labels or markings on containers or packages, describing or having reference to the contents of the containers or packages are documents. The new definition also makes clear that any material on which there are marks recognisable only by certain persons are documents (for example, Braille). Included in the definition of “document” are photographs.

Clause 6 amends section 30 by expanding on the meaning of the term “valuable security”. A valuable security would now include a credit card, a charge card, a stored value card, an automated teller machine card and such other cards which have money or money’s worth or other financial rights attached. Reward cards and discount cards do not, however, fall within the ambit of the expanded definition.

Clause 7 inserts a new section 31A to define the words “die” and “instrument” for the purposes of Chapters XII and XVIII.

Clause 8 makes a technical amendment to section 38.

Clause 9 amends section 40(2) to provide that the word “offence”, wherever it appears in certain provisions (including new sections 4 and 204B), denotes a thing punishable under the Code or any other law for the time being in force.

Clause 10 inserts new sections 41 and 42.

The new section 41 is a reflection of the current case law. It provides that an offence described as being punishable with imprisonment for a specified term or upwards includes all offences for which the maximum term of imprisonment is the specified term. As an example, under section 40(3) of the Code, reference is made to a “law with imprisonment for a term of 6 months or upwards”. A law where the maximum term of imprisonment provided is 6 months would fall within the scope of section 40(3).

The new section 42 relates to the new definition of the word “obscene”.

Clause 11 amends section 43 to provide that the words “unlawful” and “illegal” are used in the Code synonymously.

Clause 12 inserts a new section 54 which provides that the punishment of imprisonment for life under the Code or under any other written law means imprisonment for the duration of a person's natural life.

Clause 13 repeals section 57 because it has become obsolete.

Clause 14 makes a technical amendment to section 71(1).

Clause 15 inserts a new section 74 to provide for enhanced penalties for racially or religiously aggravated offences. If a person is convicted of a specified offence which is racially or religiously aggravated, the court can sentence him to one and a half times the amount of punishment he would otherwise have been liable for that offence. A Magistrate's Court and a District Court can also hear certain offences notwithstanding that the maximum term of punishment provided under the new section exceeds the jurisdictional limits of the court under the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68). The new section also defines what is "racially or religiously aggravated".

Clause 16 amends section 75 to provide that if a person has previously been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or XVII with imprisonment for 3 years or more, and he is again convicted of a similar offence, the maximum term of imprisonment a court can impose is 15 years, if he is not sentenced to imprisonment for life. The clause also deletes the reference to a person having previously been convicted of a similar offence in any part of Malaysia or Brunei Darussalam.

Clauses 17 and 18 insert new illustrations to sections 79 and 81, respectively. The illustrations are not meant to be exhaustive nor are they intended to restrict the power of the court to determine whether the general defence under section 79 or 81 is made out. Much would depend on the assessment by the court as to whether, based on the facts of any given case, any of the defences is made out.

Clause 19 repeals and re-enacts section 90 to expand the circumstances under which a consent given does not constitute a consent for the purposes of the provisions of the Code.

Clause 20 amends section 94 by expanding the scope of the defence contained in the section to include threats of instant death to any person.

Clause 21 amends section 100 to substitute the reference to "unnatural lust" in paragraph (d) with a reference to "non-consensual penile penetration of the anus", as a consequence of the repeal of section 377 on unnatural carnal intercourse.

Clause 22 inserts a new section 108B to provide that a person abets an offence within the meaning of the Code if he abets an offence committed in Singapore notwithstanding that any or all of the acts constituting the abetment were committed outside Singapore.

Clause 23 amends section 117 by updating the illustration.

Clause 24 amends section 120A to provide that a person may be a party to a criminal conspiracy notwithstanding the existence of facts of which he is unaware which make the commission of the illegal act, or the act, which is not legal, by illegal means, impossible.

Clause 25 repeals and re-enacts section 120B to provide that a person who is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit any offence will, where no express provision is made for the punishment of such a conspiracy, be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.

Clause 26 makes a technical amendment to section 121B.

Clause 27 makes a technical amendment to section 130C.

Clause 28 inserts a new Chapter VIB on “Genocide”. The new Chapter gives greater effect to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 9th December 1948 by making the commission of genocide an offence punishable with death where genocide consists of the killing of any person, or in any other case, with mandatory imprisonment which may be for life, or for a term which may extend to 20 years.

Clause 29 amends the heading of Chapter VIII to now cover offences relating to unlawful assembly.

Clause 30 amends section 141 to provide that an unlawful assembly is constituted if the common object of the assembly is to commit any offence, whether or not it relates to public tranquility. The amendment is a reflection of the current case law.

Clause 31 repeals section 151A, which is reproduced, with amendments, in new section 267C.

Clause 32 repeals sections 159 and 160. They are reproduced, with amendments, in new sections 267A and 267B, respectively.

Clauses 33, 34, 35 and 36 amend sections 167, 172, 173 and 175, respectively, to expand the scope of those sections such that they apply not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 37 amends section 182 to provide that it is not a condition in order to constitute the offence of giving false information under the section that the information be given orally or in writing. That is, it may be non-verbal means. The clause also updates illustration (c).

Clause 38 amends section 192 to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to books, records and documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 39 amends section 204 to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 40 inserts new sections 204A and 204B.

The new section 204A makes it an offence to intentionally obstruct, prevent, pervert or defeat the course of justice. It embodies the common law offence of perverting the course of justice. Examples of when an offence is constituted under the new section are as follows:

- (a) deliberately assisting a person to evade lawful arrest;

- (b) destroying, falsifying or concealing potential evidence, whether or not legal proceedings have already been instituted;
- (c) confessing or pleading guilty to an offence committed by another person, in order to shield the other person; and
- (d) knowingly acting outside the scope of one's duty as a police officer, so as to shield or excuse another person (e.g. a friend) from criminal charges.

The new section does not in any way curtail the legal professional privilege embodied in section 128 of the Evidence Act (Cap. 97).

The new section 204B creates several offences in relation to bribery of, and other means of influencing, witnesses. The penalty for both offences under new sections 204A and 204B is a maximum term of imprisonment of 7 years, or fine, or both.

Clause 41 amends section 211 to make clear that if a person institutes criminal proceedings against another person on a false charge of an offence punishable with death, or imprisonment for 7 years or upwards, he is to be punished with mandatory imprisonment for a term of up to 7 years and is also liable to fine.

Clause 42 amends section 230 to update the definitions of "coin" and "current coin" in the section.

Clause 43 amends section 236 to make clear that the abetment in Singapore of counterfeiting current coin outside Singapore is an offence.

Clause 44 inserts a new section 241A which provides that the offence of delivery of a current coin to another as genuine, which when first possessed the deliverer did not know to be counterfeit is an offence punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or with fine, or with both.

Clause 45 repeals section 243A, which deals with criminal procedure that is more appropriately dealt with in the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68).

Clause 46 makes an amendment to section 254, to maintain the distinction between offences involving coin and current coin which occurs throughout Chapter XII.

Clause 47 inserts a new section 254A, similar to existing section 254, to make it an offence for a person to deliver a current coin to another as genuine knowing that certain operations have been performed on the coin, and which the person did not know was altered when he first possessed it. The offence is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or with fine, or with both.

Clause 48 amends the heading to Chapter XIV to include offences affecting the public tranquility.

Clause 49 inserts new sections 267A, 267B and 267C.

The new sections 267A and 267B provide for the definition of affray and the punishment for affray, respectively. They are adapted from sections 159 and 160, which have been repealed by the Bill.

The new section 267C is adapted from section 151A which has been repealed by the Bill. The new section 267C makes it an offence for a person to —

- (a) make, print, possess, post, distribute or have under his control any document; or
- (b) make or communicate any electronic record, containing any incitement to violence or counselling disobedience to the law or to any lawful order of a public servant or likely to lead to any breach of the peace. The offence is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or with fine, or with both.

Clause 50 amends section 292 —

- (a) to widen the provision (prohibiting the sale, distribution, etc., of obscene objects) to cover the electronic transmission of obscene objects;
- (b) to define object to include data stored electronically that can be converted to images, writing or other forms of representation; and
- (c) to deem an object not to be obscene if the sale, letting to hire, distribution, exhibition, circulation, import, export or conveyance of, or any other dealing in, the object is authorised by or under any written law.

Clause 51 amends section 293 to increase the age of the person to whom an obscene object is sold, distributed, etc., from 20 years to 21 years. The First Schedule also increases the penalty for sale, distribution, etc., of obscene objects to young persons from a maximum term of imprisonment of 6 months to one year.

Clause 52 amends the heading to Chapter XV to include offences relating to race.

Clause 53 amends section 298 to widen the scope of the offence to include the deliberate wounding of the racial feelings of any person. The amendment also covers the deliberate wounding of the religious or racial feelings of any person by causing any matter however represented, to be seen or heard by the person.

Clause 54 inserts a new section 298A. It is an offence for a person who —

- (a) by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise, knowingly promotes or attempts to promote, on grounds of religion or race, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will between different religious or racial groups; or
- (b) commits any act which he knows is prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different religious or racial groups and which disturbs or is likely to disturb the public tranquility.

The punishment provided is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 3 years, or fine, or both.

Clause 55 amends section 304A to provide that the penalty for causing death by the doing of any rash or negligent act not amounting to culpable homicide is —

- (a) in the case of a rash act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or fine, or both; and
- (b) in the case of a negligent act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 2 years, or fine, or both.

Clause 56 amends section 307(1) by updating illustration (b).

Clause 57 inserts an explanation to section 319 which provides that a person is said to cause hurt if he causes another person to be unconscious.

Clause 58 amends section 320 to expand the meaning of “grievous hurt”. It provides that “death” and “penetration of the vagina or anus, as the case may be, of a person without that person’s consent, which causes severe bodily pain” are also deemed to be “grievous hurt”. If the penetration of the vagina or anus is not sexual in nature, but is carried out with the intent of causing hurt to the victim without the victim’s consent (e.g. with an object), it would not constitute an offence of sexual assault by penetration under the new section 376. The clause has the effect of making such a penetration of the vagina or anus punishable as an act of causing grievous hurt. As the defence of consent under section 87 does not apply to acts intended or likely to cause grievous hurt, the clause provides that only a non-consensual penetration of the vagina or anus will constitute grievous hurt, in order to exclude consensual sexual acts which may cause severe bodily pain in some cases.

Clause 59 amends section 336 to provide that the penalty for doing any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others is —

- (a) in the case of a rash act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 6 months, or fine which may extend to $2,500, or both; and
- (b) in the case of a negligent act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 3 months, or fine which may extend to $1,500, or both.

Clause 60 amends section 337 to provide that the penalty for causing hurt by doing any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others is —

- (a) in the case of a rash act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or fine which may extend to $5,000, or both; and
- (b) in the case of a negligent act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 6 months, or fine which may extend to $2,500, or both.

Clause 61 amends section 338 to provide that the penalty for causing grievous hurt by doing any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others is —

- (a) in the case of a rash act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 4 years, or fine which may extend to $10,000, or both; and
- (b) in the case of a negligent act, imprisonment for a term which may extend to 2 years, or fine which may extend to $5,000, or both.

Clause 62 amends section 350 by updating illustrations (b) and (c) and deleting illustration (i).

Clause 63 repeals and re-enacts section 354 to provide that outrage of modesty is punishable with any combination of the prescribed punishments, and to provide an enhanced penalty where outrage of modesty is committed against a child under 14 years of age. The enhanced penalty is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or fine, or caning, or any combination of such punishments.

Clause 64 inserts a new section 363A on punishment for abduction. Currently, there is no prescribed penalty for the offence of abduction. The penalty provided under the new section 363A is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 7 years, or fine, or caning, or any combination of such punishments.

Clause 65 inserts a new section 364A on kidnapping or abducting in order to compel the Government, etc. If the kidnapping or abduction is to compel the Government to do or abstain from doing any act, the penalty is death or imprisonment for life, or if the offender is not sentenced to death, he is also liable to fine or caning. If the kidnapping or abduction is to compel any other person to do or abstain from doing any act, the penalty is mandatory term of imprisonment which may extend to 15 years, and the offender is also liable to fine or caning.

Clause 66 amends section 367 to substitute the reference to “unnatural lust” with a reference to “non-consensual penile penetration of the anus”, as a consequence of the repeal of section 377 on unnatural carnal intercourse.

Clause 67 deletes the sub-heading “Rape” immediately above section 375 and substitutes it with the sub-heading “Sexual offences”. “Sexual offences” will be the new sub-heading for new sections 375 to 377D.

Clause 68 repeals sections 375 to 376D and inserts new sections 375, 376 and 376A to 376G.

The new section 375 re-enacts the offence of rape with some modifications, and introduces exceptions to the husband’s marital immunity from rape. These exceptions are applicable to spouses in both Muslim and non-Muslim marriages. The reference to matrimonial proceedings in the exceptions refers to both local and foreign matrimonial proceedings. The section provides that consensual penile-vaginal penetration between a married couple is not an offence, regardless of the age of the spouse.

The new section 376 provides for a new offence of sexual assault by penetration, which makes punishable non-consensual penetration of the anus and mouth of the victim (B) by the penis of the offender (section 376(1)(a)), and non-consensual sexual penetration of the vagina or anus of the victim (B) by a body part of the offender or an object (section 376(2)(a)). The section also makes punishable the act of causing another person (B) to commit sexual penetration without B’s consent (section 376(1)(b) and (2)(b) and (c)). The penalty is a mandatory term of imprisonment which may extend to 20 years, and fine or caning. In this latter category of offences (section 376(1)(b) and (2)(b) and (c)), the person (B) is the victim as B is caused by A to commit sexual penetration without B’s consent. In cases where the third party (C) also does not consent to the sexual penetration by B (section 376(2)(b) and (c)), the offender can also be prosecuted for abetting B in the commission of one or more offences under new sections 375 and 376(1)(a) and (2)(a) against the third party (C). The section also provides for an enhanced penalty for aggravated forms of sexual assault by penetration which is analogous to aggravated forms of rape. The enhanced penalty is a mandatory term of imprisonment of not less than 8 years and not more than 20 years, and mandatory caning of not less than 12 strokes. The enhanced penalty is the same as the enhanced penalty for aggravated rape.

The new section 376A provides for a new offence of sexual penetration of a minor under 16 years of age, which makes punishable sexual penetration of the vagina or anus of a minor under 16 years of age by the penis or body part of the offender or by an object (section 376A(1)(a) and (b)). The section also makes punishable penetration of the mouth of a minor under 16 years of age by the penis of the offender (section 376A(1)(a)). The section makes punishable the act of causing a minor under 16 years of age to penetrate with his penis, the vagina, anus or mouth of another person including the offender (section 376A(1)(c)), and the act of causing a minor under 16 years of age to sexually penetrate with a body part or an object, the vagina or anus of any person including the offender and the minor himself or herself (section 376A(1)(d)). In this latter category of offences (section 376A(1)(c) and (d)), the minor (B) is the victim as B is caused by A to commit sexual penetration. In cases where the third party is also under 16 years of age, the offender can also be prosecuted for abetting B in the commission of one or more offences under the new section 376A(1)(a) and (b) against the third party. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 10 years, or fine or both, and if the offence is committed against a minor under 14 years of age, the enhanced penalty is a mandatory term of imprisonment which may extend to 20 years, and fine or caning. The section provides that consensual penetration between a married couple is not an offence. With respect to non-consensual penile-vaginal penetration, the section provides for the husband's marital immunity similar to the marital immunity from rape, and provides for similar exceptions to the marital immunity.

The new section 376B provides for a new offence of commercial sex with a minor under 18 years of age. It is an offence for a person to obtain for consideration penetrative sexual services of a minor under 18 years of age. The offence is made out when a person has obtained the sexual services of a minor (i.e. sexual services have been provided by the minor) for consideration. The penalty for this offence is a maximum term of imprisonment of 7 years, or fine or both. The section also makes it an offence for any person to communicate with another person (including the minor) for the purpose of obtaining for consideration such sexual services. The penalty for this offence is a maximum term of imprisonment of 2 years, or fine or both. The section provides that it is not an offence to obtain sexual services from a person's own spouse.

The new section 376C makes it an offence for a citizen or permanent resident of Singapore to do any act outside Singapore which would constitute an offence under section 376B if done in Singapore. The section has extra-territorial effect, and clause 108 amends section 129(1)(b) of the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68) to require the previous sanction of the Public Prosecutor for a prosecution under the new section 376C. The penalty is the same punishment as that imposed under section 376B.

The new section 376D makes it an offence to organise or promote tours outside Singapore for commercial sex with any minor under 18 years of age. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 10 years, or fine or both.

The new section 376E provides for a new offence of sexual grooming of a minor under 16 years of age. An adult (of or above the age of 21 years) who meets or travels to meet a minor under 16 years of age within Singapore with the intention of committing a relevant offence, will be guilty of an offence if the person had met or communicated with the minor on 2 or more previous occasions. It is immaterial whether those prior meetings or communications had taken place in or outside Singapore. The offence is made out if the meeting or travelling described in the new section 376E(1)(a) is in Singapore, even if the offender had travelled partly outside Singapore prior to the meeting or travelling. For example, if an offender travels from a foreign country to Singapore, and travels within Singapore to meet a minor, the offence is made out. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 3 years, or fine or both.

The new section 376F makes it an offence for a person to intentionally touch a mentally disabled person sexually where the mentally disabled person's consent had been obtained by means of an inducement, threat or deception and the person knew or could reasonably be expected to know of the mental disability. A mental disability means an impairment of or a disturbance in the functioning of the mind or brain resulting from any disability or disorder of the mind or brain which impairs the ability to make a proper judgment in the giving of consent to sexual touching. The section punishes the exploitation of the mentally disabled person's vulnerability. It is not an offence to sexually touch or engage in consensual sexual activity per se with a mentally disabled person within the meaning of this section, if there was no inducement, threat or deception involved, or if the person did not know and could not reasonably be expected to know of the mental disability. It is not an offence under this section for a person to engage in consensual sexual activity with his or her spouse who is mentally disabled. Sexual touching includes sexual penetration. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 2 years, or fine or both, and where penetration is involved, the enhanced penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 10 years, or fine or both.

The new section 376G re-enacts the offence of incest under existing sections 376A, 376B and 376C, with an expanded scope of acts defined as incest. The scope of incest is expanded to include various forms of sexual penetration of the vagina, anus and mouth of a woman, apart from penile-vaginal penetration. The degree of kinship for the proscribed conduct has been expanded to include a grandmother and grandson, for consistency with the existing inclusion of a grandfather and grand-daughter in the offence of incest. The section has been further refined so that it is not an offence for a young man under 16 years of age to commit incest, for consistency with the existing minimum age of 16 years for a female offender. The penalty for both a male and female offender is a maximum term of imprisonment of 5 years, and where a man commits the offence against a woman under 14 years of age, the enhanced penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 14 years. Clause 108 amends section 129(1)(b) of the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68) to require the previous sanction of the Public Prosecutor for a prosecution under the new section 376G.

Clause 69 deletes the sub-heading “Unnatural offences” immediately above section 377. Together with the deletion of the sub-heading “Rape” immediately above section 375 and its substitution with the sub-heading “Sexual offences”, new sections 375 to 377D will fall under the new sub-heading “Sexual offences”.

Clause 70 repeals section 377 on unnatural carnal intercourse and introduces a new section 377 which makes it an offence for a man to penetrate with his penis the vagina, anus or mouth, as the case may be, of a human corpse. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 5 years, or fine or both. The new section 377 also makes it an offence to cause a man to commit such a penetration without his consent, which carries an enhanced penalty of a mandatory term of imprisonment which may extend to 20 years, and fine or caning. The scope of the new section 377 falls beyond the scope of the existing section 377. Some of the acts that were previously within the scope of the existing section 377 are now included within new sections 376, 376A, 376B, 376F, 376G and 377B. With the repeal of the existing section 377, consensual sexual penetration of the vagina, anus or mouth between a man and a woman, both of whom are of or above the age of 16 years, which does not fall within new section 376B, 376F or 376G, will no longer be an offence. However, such acts committed in public may still amount to an offence under section 294 of the Code or provisions under other written law.

Clause 71 inserts new sections 377B, 377C and 377D.

The new section 377B makes it an offence to penetrate with a person’s penis, the vagina, anus or any orifice of a living animal or to cause that person’s own vagina, anus or mouth to be penetrated by a living animal’s penis. The penalty is a maximum term of imprisonment of 2 years, or fine or both. The new section 377B also makes it an offence to cause any man to penetrate with his penis, without his consent, the vagina, anus or any orifice of a living animal, or to cause the vagina, anus or mouth of any person to be penetrated with a living animal’s penis without that person’s consent. The enhanced penalty for such an offence is a mandatory term of imprisonment which may extend to 20 years, and fine or caning.

The new section 377C contains interpretative provisions that apply to new sections 375 to 377B. Section 377C covers the interpretation of the words “penetration”, “sexual” and “vagina”, and sets out provisions for interpreting references to a part of the body and identifying the sex of a person. The effect of providing that penetration is a continuing act from entry to withdrawal, is that although a penetration may be consensual at the point of entry, the continuing penetration will subsequently become non-consensual from the time of the withdrawal of the consent by the penetrated party, and the penetrative party may be required to withdraw the penetration upon the withdrawal of consent. A person may be guilty of an offence involving non-consensual penetration if the person does not withdraw the penetrative body part (including penis) or object upon the victim’s withdrawal of consent after penetration had taken place.

The effect of the application of new section 377C(b) and (c) for interpreting references to a part of the body and identifying the sex of a person, is that a man who has undergone sex reassignment surgery to become a female will be regarded as a woman for the purposes of sections 375 to 377B, and a reference to penetration of the vagina in new sections 375, 376, 376A, 376B, 376F, 376G, 377 and 377B will be read to include a reference to penetration of the surgically constructed vagina. The new section 377C(e) provides that a reference to “vagina” includes a reference to the “vulva”, so that the slightest degree of penetration is sufficient to constitute vaginal penetration.

Section 377C(d) prescribes an objective test for the meaning of “sexual”. The provision requires penetration, or touching or other activity to satisfy one of 2 tests in order to be sexual. The first limb (section 377C(d)(i)) focuses on the nature of the act. An act is sexual within the meaning of this first limb if, without considering the circumstances or any person’s purpose with which the act is done, a reasonable person would consider that the act is sexual because of its nature. Examples of conduct which because of their nature would always satisfy the first limb are sexual intercourse, anal sex and oral sex. In these cases, because of the nature of the activity, a reasonable person would consider that the activity is sexual. The first limb is not satisfied if objectively the nature of the act is simply capable of being (i.e. may or may not be) sexual.

The second limb (section 377C(d)(ii)) deals with the case where objectively the nature of an activity is simply capable of being (i.e. may or may not be) sexual. Examples of such a case would be inserting a finger into a woman’s vagina or a person’s anus or where someone removes another person’s clothes, or where someone touches the genital organs of himself or another person, or kisses another person, or strokes another person’s thigh (whether clad or not). The second limb states that the question is whether a reasonable person would consider that because of its nature the act may be sexual and because of the circumstances of the activity or any person’s purpose in relation to it (not just the person who does the act, but also, for example, someone who encourages the act to be done), or both, the activity is sexual.

For example, a reasonable person would consider that touching of a woman’s genitals may, because of its nature, be sexual, and would consider that such touching for sexual gratification is sexual in the light of the purpose with which the touching is done. On the other hand, a reasonable person would not consider that touching a woman’s genitals is sexual if it is performed by a gynaecologist who is conducting a bona fide medical examination.

Another example is where a mother tells her young child to strip in her presence before the child takes a bath; a reasonable person would consider that the child’s act of stripping by its nature may be sexual, but no reasonable person would conclude from its circumstances or purpose of anyone (including the mother) that it is sexual. On the other hand, suppose a man bribed a young child into stripping in front of him in his room for purposes of sexual gratification. A reasonable man would think that the act because of its nature may be sexual, but would also consider (by reference to its circumstances and the man’s purpose) that it is sexual. This is an example of the type of case where it is the purpose of a person other than the one who does the act which is a relevant factor.

The new section 377D provides that the defence of reasonable mistake as to the age of the victim under section 79 will not be available to a person charged with an offence under section 376A(2), 376B or 376C, but the defence will be available to a person so charged who was under 21 years of age at the time of the alleged offence unless that person had been charged for one of the listed offences prior to the time of the offence. Clause 107 amends section 140(4) and (5) of the Women's Charter (Cap. 353) to align the equivalent defence with new section 377D. Under the existing section 140(4) and (5) of the Women's Charter, the defence of "reasonable cause to believe that a girl was above the age of 16 years" is available only on the first occasion a person is charged with the offence of carnal connection under section 140(1)(i) of the Women's Charter. This creates a problem where a person is charged with more than one offence under section 140(1)(i) of the Women's Charter and the charges are tried separately. The defence under the existing section 140(5) of the Women's Charter will not be available to that person during his second trial for the second charge, even though that second offence is alleged to have been committed prior to the first trial for the first charge, as that second trial would not be the first occasion on which he is charged for an offence under section 140(1)(i) of the Women's Charter. The new section 377D has been drafted to avoid this unintended effect, and clause 107 amends section 140(4) and (5) of the Women's Charter to align the defence with the new section 377D.

Clause 72 amends section 379A to remove the mandatory minimum imprisonment term of one year. The minimum disqualification period of 3 years before an offender can hold or obtain a driving licence under the Road Traffic Act (Cap. 276) upon his release from imprisonment is also removed. The clause also makes clear that the term "component part" only applies to a component part which is attached to a motor vehicle and would include any tyre, accessory or equipment attached to the motor vehicle.

Clause 73 amends section 383 to provide that extortion may be committed by putting a person in fear of any harm to that person or any other person in body, mind, reputation or property even if the harm is to be caused legally.

Clause 74 repeals and re-enacts section 385 as a consequence of the amendment to section 383 (whereby the concept of extortion is widened).

Clause 75 amends section 397 to provide that if at the time of committing or attempting to commit robbery, the offender is armed with or uses any deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt to any person, or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, then any other person jointly concerned in committing or attempting to commit such robbery is liable to caning.

- (a) the punishment for any person who dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property, knowing or having reason to believe that it is stolen, is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or fine, or both; and
- (b) if the property stolen is a motor vehicle or any component part of a motor vehicle as defined in section 379A(3), the punishment is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years and the offender is also liable to fine in addition to being disqualified from holding or obtaining a driving licence under the Road Traffic Act from the date of his release from imprisonment.

Clause 77 repeals and re-enacts section 414 to provide that —

- (a) the punishment for any person who voluntarily assists in the concealing or disposing of or making away with property which he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property, is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or fine, or both; and

- (b) if the property stolen is a motor vehicle or any component part of a motor vehicle as defined in section 379A(3), the punishment is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years and the offender is also liable to fine in addition to being disqualified from holding or obtaining a driving licence under the Road Traffic Act from the date of his release from imprisonment.

Clause 78 amends section 415 to provide that —

- (a) the deception may or may not be the sole or main inducement that induces a person to act or to omit to act for the purposes of cheating;
- (b) it is sufficient to make out the offence of cheating that the act or omission that the deception induces causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to any person; and
- (c) whoever makes a representation through an agent is to be treated as having made the representation himself.

Clause 79 amends section 427 by increasing the monetary value of the loss or damage caused by the mischief from $25 to $500, and by deleting the marginal note and inserting a new section heading.

Clause 80 repeals and re-enacts section 428 to consolidate the section with the repealed section 429 and to remove the reference to the monetary value of the animal that is the subject of the mischief. The punishment provided is imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years, or fine, or both.

Clause 81 repeals section 429 as it is consolidated into the new section 428.

Clause 82 makes a technical amendment to section 430.

Clause 85 deletes and substitutes the heading to Chapter XVIII to include a reference to electronic records.

Clause 86 amends section 463 to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 87 repeals and re-enacts section 464 (excluding the illustrations and Explanations therein) to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records and the affixing of electronic signatures.

Clause 88 amends section 466 to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 89 amends section 467 to replace the word “son” with gender neutral terminology.

Clauses 90 and 91 amend sections 468 and 469, respectively, to expand the scope of those sections such that they apply not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 92 repeals and re-enacts section 470 to provide that a false document or false electronic record, made wholly or in part by forgery, is designated as “forged document” and “forged electronic record”, respectively.

Clause 93 amends section 471 to expand the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 94 inserts new sections 473A, 473B and 473C to provide for 2 new offences. Under the offence of making or possessing equipment for making a false instrument, an offender may be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years or with fine or with both. Under the offence of making or possessing equipment for making a false instrument with the intention of inducing prejudice, an offender may be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 10 years or with fine or with both. These new sections may be used to deal more effectively with credit card fraud.

Clauses 95 and 96 amend sections 474 and 476, respectively, to expand the scope of those sections such that they apply not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records. Clause 95 also deletes the marginal note to section 474 and inserts a new section heading.

Clause 97 amends section 477 to replace the term “son” with gender neutral terminology.

Clause 98 amends section 477A to make clear that it is an offence for a clerk, an officer, etc., to wilfully and with intent to defraud, conceal any book, paper, etc., which belongs to his employer, etc. The clause further expands on the scope of the section such that it applies not only in relation to documents (as defined under the Code), but also to electronic records.

Clause 99 makes a technical amendment to section 489A(2).

Clause 100 repeals section 489E as it concerns a matter of criminal procedure more appropriately dealt with in the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68).

Clause 101 repeals section 498 on the archaic offence of enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman.

Clause 102 amends section 499 to make clear that in the offence of defamation an imputation may be made or published in any medium including an electronic medium.

Clause 104 amends section 511 to provide that where a person attempts to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment or fine or with a combination of such punishments, or attempts to cause such an offence to be committed, and in such attempt does any act towards the commission of the offence, the person is to be punished with such punishment as is provided for the offence, in the absence of any express provision. However, the longest term of imprisonment that may be imposed in the case where the attempt relates to an offence punishable with imprisonment for life, is 15 years. The longest term of imprisonment that may be imposed in any other case is one-half of the longest term provided for the offence.

Clause 105 makes miscellaneous amendments to the Code in relation to the penalties of various offences in the Code.

Clause 106 makes miscellaneous amendments to the illustrations in the Code by updating the illustrations and removing archaic illustrations.

Clause 107 makes related and consequential amendments to other written laws.

In particular, the clause amends the Women’s Charter (Cap. 353) —

- (a) to insert a definition for “sexual penetration” which is aligned with the scope of sexual penetration in sections 376A(1)(a) and (b), 376B(4) and 376F(3) of the Penal Code;
- (b) to align the meaning and scope of “prostitution” with section 376B of the Penal Code, by substituting the words “promiscuous sexual intercourse” in the definition of “prostitution” with “sexual penetration”;
- (c) to delete and substitute subsections (4) and (5) of section 140, to align the provisions with section 377D of the Penal Code;
- (d) to expand the scope of conduct covered in sections 143, 144(1) and 145 to include oral and anal intercourse and other penetrative sexual activity;
- (e) to provide in section 153(1) and (3) for the court to order proceedings to be dealt with in camera for offences in respect of any woman or girl under the new sections 375, 376, 376A, 376B, 376C, 376D, 376E, 376F, 376G and 377B of the Penal Code, or offences of attempting to commit the same or attempting to cause the commission of the same; and
- (f) to provide in section 155(1) for the power of the court to order any woman or girl in respect of whom an offence under the new section 375, 376, 376A, 376B, 376C, 376D, 376E, 376F, 376G or 377B of the Penal Code is alleged to have been committed to be detained temporarily in a place of safety.

The clause amends section 7 of the Children and Young Persons Act (Cap. 38) to also make it an offence to procure or attempt to procure the commission of any obscene or indecent act by any child or young person. For example, if a person by threats or inducement makes a child strip and perform an indecent act on himself or herself, such an act would not fall within the existing section 7 which covers “any obscene or indecent act with any child”, but would fall within the amended section 7(b) which covers “any obscene or indecent act by any child”.

The clause amends section 112(1) of the Singapore Armed Forces Act (Cap. 295) to include a reference to “sexual assault by penetration” in a new paragraph (da) and in paragraph (v). The effect of the amendments is that the Subordinate Military Court has no power to impose caning for the offence of sexual assault by penetration, similar to the position for the offence of rape.

Clause 108 makes related and consequential amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68) —

- (a) by making an amendment to section 11(1) to allow the High Court to impose all 3 punishments of imprisonment, fine and caning;
- (b) by making an amendment to section 22;
- (c) by inserting a new section 68A relating to powers of search and seize; the new section contains the substance of existing sections 243A and 489E of the Penal Code (repealed by clauses 45 and 100, respectively);
