

Jasmin Lau 刘洁敏

- Former Deputy Secretary (Policy) at the Ministry of Health, in charge of healthcare financing, healthcare manpower and healthcare regulatory policy
- Former Executive Director of the Singapore Global Network at the Economic Development Board, tasked to build connections and networks for Singapore globally
- Served as a Board Member of the Build and Construction Authority
- Served as a Member of the Board of Trustees at the Singapore Institute of Technology
- Served as a Council Member of the National Youth Council, Singapore

Jasmin has been playing team sports throughout her life, and believes in the value of bringing together teammates of diverse abilities to achieve something greater.

Her leadership values are based on mutual respect, mutual reliance and mutual gratitude. She believes in doing her best to build a Singapore where differences do not divide us, but instead are our source of strength.

As a mother of two young children, she understands that parents and families need strong support as they navigate the early childhood years. She also understands that caregivers are often stretched, and would like to seek out ways to ease their burdens.

Professionally, Jasmin served in the public service for 19 years, shaping key policies in finance, manpower and healthcare. She most recently served as the Deputy Secretary (Policy) at the Ministry of Health from 2022 to 2025, and spent two years before that at the Economic Development Board as the Executive Director of the Singapore Global Network. She has had the chance to engage with singaporeans and stakeholders across all walks of life, and she looks forward to meeting you too.

In her free time, Jasmin loves being with her husband and two young boys, or playing netball and basketball with her teammates.