

CV as at May 2025

Shawn Loh is in his 30s and is a father of four children, all aged below 12. His family has given him a strong sense of purpose and a healthy sense of humour!

Shawn's life mission is to make a positive difference wherever he goes. He has contributed as a senior civil servant in areas that he is passionate about: education, CPF, population policies, economic development, and finance. He was the director of our national SG60 Budget and oversaw the development of schemes including CDC vouchers, to provide strong support to address cost of living anxieties.

He spent some years in the private sector during Covid-19 at Commonwealth Capital Group, a local home-grown enterprise employing more than 1,000 workers, and has returned as Deputy Group Managing Director to lead the company in its next phase of growth. He knows how important businesses are in creating good jobs for all, especially against the backdrop of a far more uncertain global economic environment.

Shawn's academic background includes a Masters in Financial Economics from the University of Oxford and a Bachelors in Economics from the University of Chicago.
