Punishment of specified offences with elements occurring

20 4B.—(1) A specified offence is deemed to have been committed in Singapore where —

- 25 (a) a relevant act of the specified offence occurs in Singapore and any other relevant act of that specified offence occurs outside Singapore;

Repeal and re-enactment of section 22 and new section 22A

6. Section 22 of the Penal Code is repealed and the following sections substituted therefor:

““Property”

22. In this Code —

“immovable property” means land, benefits to arise out of land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth; 10

“movable property” includes property of every description, except immovable property;

“property” means money and all other property, movable or immovable, including things in action, other intangible or incorporeal property and virtual currency; 15

“virtual currency” means a digital representation of value in money or money’s worth that can be digitally traded and functions as a medium of exchange, a unit of account or store of value, regardless of whether it is legal tender in any country or territory including Singapore. 20

Illustration

Writings, relating to real or personal property or rights, are movable property. 25

“Fault element” and “physical element”

22A.—(1) A fault element of an offence refers to any state of mind, proof of which is needed to establish liability under that offence, including but not limited to intention, wilfulness, knowledge, rashness and negligence. 30

(2) A physical element of an offence refers to any fact, proof of which is needed to establish liability under that offence, and that is not a fault element of that offence.”.

Repeal and re-enactment of sections 23, 24 and 25

5 7. Sections 23, 24 and 25 of the Penal Code are repealed and the following sections substituted therefor:

““Wrongful gain” and “wrongful loss”

10 23.—(1) A “wrongful gain” is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining it is not legally entitled or avoidance by unlawful means of a loss of property to which the person avoiding it is not legally entitled to avoid.

(2) A “wrongful loss” is loss or exposure of risk to a loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it or exposed to the risk of losing it is legally entitled.

15 Explanation 1.—A person is said to gain wrongfully when the person retains wrongfully, as well as when the person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when the person is wrongfully kept out of any property, as well as when the person is wrongfully deprived of property.

20 Explanation 2.—The word “gain” includes a gain by keeping what one has, as well as a gain by getting what one does not have.

Explanation 3.—The word “loss” includes a loss by not getting what one might get, as well as a loss by parting with what one has.

“Dishonestly”

24. A person (A) is said to do an act dishonestly if —

25 (a) A does that act with the intention of causing wrongful gain to A or another person, or wrongful loss to another person, regardless of whether such gain or loss is temporary or permanent; or 30 (b) that act done by A is dishonest by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons and A knows that that act is dishonest by such standards.

“Fraudulently”

25. A person (A) is said to do an act fraudulently if A does that act with intent to deceive another person (B) and by means of such deception, that an advantage should accrue to A or another person or detriment should befall B or another person (other than A), regardless of whether such advantage or detriment is temporary or permanent. 5

Explanation 1.—Where the advantage or the detriment A intended by means of the act done is so slight that no reasonable person of ordinary sense or temper would complain of it, the act is not done fraudulently. 10

Explanation 2.—It is sufficient in any charge for an offence under this Code involving doing an act fraudulently to allege a general intent to act fraudulently without naming any particular person intended to be deceived.”.

New sections 26A to 26H

8. The Penal Code is amended by inserting, immediately after section 26, the following sections: 15

““Voluntarily”

26A. A person is said to cause an effect “voluntarily” when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it. 20

Illustration

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating a robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by this act; yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily. 25

“Good faith”

26B. Nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention. 30

“Intentionally”

26C.—(1) A person is said to do an act intentionally where that person does an act deliberately.

(2) A person is said to cause an effect intentionally where that person does anything that causes an effect —

(a) with the purpose of causing that effect; or

(b) knowing that that effect would be virtually certain (barring an unforeseen intervention) to result.

(3) To avoid doubt, a person does not intend or foresee a result of his acts by reason only of it being a natural and probable consequence of those acts.

(4) To avoid doubt, nothing in this section prevents a court from relying on a person's foresight that a certain effect was a probable consequence of his act as a basis to draw an inference that the person caused that effect intentionally.

Explanation.—Intention is distinct from motive or desire, and a person may do an act or cause an effect intentionally even if doing so was not his motive or he had no desire to do so.

“Knowingly”

26D.—(1) Whoever does an act with awareness that a circumstance exists, will exist, or is virtually certain (barring an unforeseen intervention) to exist, is said to do that act knowingly in respect of that circumstance.

(2) Whoever does an act with awareness that an effect will be caused, or is virtually certain (barring an unforeseen intervention) to be caused, is said to do that act knowingly in respect of that effect.

(3) Where doing an act knowingly is a fault element of an offence, that fault element is also established where that act is done intentionally.

“Rashly”

26E.—(1) Whoever does any act knowing that there is a real risk that a particular circumstance exists or will exist, and that it is unreasonable to take that real risk, is said to do that act rashly in respect of that particular circumstance.

(2) Whoever does any act knowing that there is a real risk that an effect will be caused and that it is unreasonable to take that real risk is said to do that thing rashly in respect of that effect.

(3) Where doing an act rashly is a fault element of an offence, that fault element is also established where that act is done intentionally or knowingly. 5

“Negligently”

26F.—(1) Whoever omits to do an act which a reasonable person would do, or does any act which a reasonable person would not do, is said to do so negligently. 10

(2) Where doing an act negligently is a fault element of an offence, that fault element is also established where that act is done intentionally, knowingly or rashly.

“Transferred fault”

26G.—(1) This section applies to any offence under this Code or any other written law where a fault element of the offence is intention or knowledge, except where section 301(1) applies to that offence. 15

(2) Where all the fault elements and physical elements of the offence have been proven in respect of an accused person, and assuming no defence or exception applies, the accused person shall be guilty of the offence despite the following circumstances: 20

(a) the physical elements of the offence included the doing of an act or the causing of an effect concerning a person or thing; 25

(b) at the time such act or effect was done or caused, the accused person believed or intended that the act or effect would concern a person or thing different from the person or thing mentioned in paragraph (a). 30

(3) Subsection (2) applies only where the accused person did or caused the physical elements in subsection (2)(a) negligently in respect of the person or thing mentioned in that subsection.

Illustrations

(a) A throws a stone at B intending to hurt B (but not intending, knowing or having reason to believe that anyone else would be hurt), but the stone hurts C. A commits an offence of voluntarily causing hurt in respect of C if A threw the stone negligently in respect of C.

(b) A throws a stone at a porcelain vase intending to cause loss to its owner, B (but not intending or knowing it likely that A would cause wrongful loss or damage in respect of any other property), but the stone damages a clay pot belonging to C. A commits mischief in respect of C if A threw the stone negligently in respect of C.

(c) A threatens injury to B's person by shouting at B the words, "B, I will kill you", with intent to cause alarm to B. C hears these words and is alarmed. A does not commit the offence of criminal intimidation against C as A did not threaten C with any injury.

(4) To avoid doubt, nothing in this section affects the requirement to prove all the fault elements of an offence in order for guilt to be established for that offence.

Illustrations

(a) A throws a stone at B intending to hurt B (but not intending or not knowing that A is likely to cause wrongful loss or damage in respect of any property), but the stone hits a porcelain vase. A does not commit mischief in respect of the vase. This is because A did not possess the fault element required to commit mischief.

(b) A throws a stone at B intending to hurt B (but not intending, knowing or having reason to believe that anyone else would be hurt), but the stone hurts P, a police officer in discharge of his duty. A commits an offence of voluntarily causing hurt against P. A does not commit an offence of voluntarily causing hurt to P in the discharge of P's duty as a public servant because A did not possess the fault element required to commit this offence.

(c) A throws a stone at B intending to hurt B (but not intending or not knowing that A is likely to cause grievous hurt), but the stone causes grievous hurt to C. A commits an offence against C of voluntarily causing hurt where grievous hurt is caused under section 323A. A does not commit an offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt against C because A did not possess the fault element required to commit this offence.

(5) Where the circumstances mentioned in subsection (2)(a) and (b) exist, the accused person may rely on any defence or exception in law as though the act or effect mentioned in subsection (2)(a) concerned the person or thing the accused person believed or intended that act or effect to concern.

Illustration

A throws a stone at B in exercise of A's right of private defence against B, but the stone hurts C. A may rely on the defence of private defence against B if A is charged for voluntarily causing hurt to C.

“Strict liability”

26H.—(1) An offence of strict liability under this Code or any written law is one where, for every physical element of the offence, there is no corresponding fault element.

(2) Strict liability is said to apply to a particular physical element of an offence where there is no corresponding fault element for that physical element, regardless of whether or not the offence is one of strict liability.

10

(3) To avoid doubt, an offence may be a strict liability offence even though it is not so expressly described by any written law; and strict liability may apply to a particular physical element of that offence even though it is not so expressly described in any written law.

15

(4) It is a defence for any person charged with a strict liability offence to prove that in doing anything or omitting to do anything specified in the charge, he exercised reasonable care.”.

20

9. Section 30 of the Penal Code is amended —

“(b) An electronic bill of lading in the form of an electronic record in a secure electronic trading system is a “valuable security”.”.

30

Amendment of section 33

10. The Penal Code is amended by renumbering section 33 as subsection (1) of that section, and by inserting immediately thereafter the following subsection and illustration:

- 5 “(2) To avoid doubt, where a person does a series of acts, one or more of which caused a certain effect, that person is regarded to have caused that effect by that series of acts even if it is not known which of the acts in that series caused that effect.

Illustration

- 10 A gives Z small doses of poison in Z’s food at different times over the course of a few days, with intent to kill Z. Z dies from poisoning, although it is not known which of those doses (individually or collectively) caused Z’s death. A has caused Z’s death by poisoning.”.

New section 44A

13. The Penal Code is amended by inserting, immediately after section 44, the following section:

(2) This section does not apply where the offender (A) proves that, despite A being an employer of the domestic worker (B), a member of B’s employer’s household or an employment agent of B, the relationship between A and B did not adversely affect B’s ability to protect herself from A in respect of the harm caused by the offence.

15 (2) Despite subsection (1), when a mistake of fact or ignorance of a fact negates the fault element required to establish liability under an offence, then to avoid doubt, that offence is not made out.

Explanation.—Where the physical and fault elements of an offence are proven, and the accused person proves the defence under subsection (1), the accused person is not guilty of that offence.”; and “(e) A, an officer of a court, being ordered by that court to arrest Y, and, after due enquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

25 (f) A sees a watch on Z’s desk, which is identical to one that A owns, and mistakenly believes the watch is actually his. A intentionally takes the watch out of Z’s possession without Z’s consent while labouring under such mistaken belief. A has not committed an offence of theft as he did not intend to dishonestly
30 take the watch out of Z’s possession.”.

“Mistake of law or ignorance of law not defence

Explanation.—A lawful act in this section is any act which is not an offence under this Code or any written law and which is not otherwise prohibited by law.”; and

(c) by relettering the Illustration as illustration (a), and by inserting immediately thereafter the following illustration: 30

“(b) A operates a construction crane and activates a control that causes a heavy load to fall onto B, killing B. A did not act negligently, but his activation of the control caused this result because the construction crane was malfunctioning. A has not committed an offence of causing death by doing a negligent act 35 under section 304A as he did not possess the requisite fault element of negligence.”.

- (b) incapable of knowing that what he is doing is wrong (whether wrong by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons or wrong as contrary to law); or

- (c) completely deprived of any power to control his actions.

A, while labouring under a delusion, believes that he has received divine instructions to kill Z and that it is morally right for him to do so. A however knows that it is contrary to law to kill Z. A kills Z. Here, the defence of unsoundness of mind is not available to A as he is capable of knowing that it is contrary to law to kill Z.

Amendment of section 85

28. Section 85 of the Penal Code is amended by deleting subsection (2) and substituting the following subsections:

Repeal of sections 98 to 106 and new sections 98 to 106A

32. Sections 98 to 106 of the Penal Code are repealed and the following sections substituted therefor:

“Extent to which right may be exercised

98.—(1) The right of private defence does not extend to the inflicting of more harm than it is reasonably necessary in the circumstances.

(2) There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is reasonable opportunity to have recourse to the protection of a public authority in the circumstances.

Illustrations

(a) Z ambushes A in a secluded area and attempts to kill A. A kills Z while fending off Z's attack. A is guilty of no offence because, in the circumstances, A had no reasonable opportunity to have recourse to the protection of a public authority. 5

(b) Z ambushes A in a secluded area and attempts to kill A. A's right of private defence arises because, at that point of time, A had no reasonable opportunity to have recourse to the protection of a public authority. In the midst of the struggle between A and Z, a police patrol car arrives on the scene. A's right of private defence ceases the moment A had reasonable opportunity to have recourse to the protection of the police. 10

Right of private defence against act of person of unsound mind, etc.

99. When an act, which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence, by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind, or the intoxication of the person doing that act, or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence. 15
20

Illustrations

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A. Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters, by night, a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a housebreaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were not acting under that misconception. 25

Right of private defence against deadly assault when there is risk of harm to innocent person

 30

100. If, in the exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which causes the defender to reasonably believe that death would be caused to him or to any other person and the defender is so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk. 35

Illustration

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. A cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob, and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

*Right of private defence of bodyStart and continuance of right of private defence of body

101.—(1) The right of private defence of the body starts as soon as the defender reasonably believes that there is danger to the body (either his own or that of any other person) arising from any act which is an offence against the human body or an attempt or a threat to commit the offence, though the offence may not have been committed.

(2) The right of private defence continues as long as the belief of danger mentioned in subsection (1) continues.

When right of private defence of body extends to causing death

102. The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in sections 98 and 106A, to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, if the offence which gives rise to the exercise of the right is of any of the following descriptions:

- (a) an assault where the defender reasonably believes that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;
- (b) an assault where the defender reasonably believes that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;
- (c) an assault that the defender reasonably believes to be done with the intention of committing rape as described in section 375 or causing such rape to be committed;
- (d) an assault that the defender reasonably believes to be done with the intention of causing penile penetration of the vagina, anus or mouth as described in section 376(1) or (2);

- (e) an assault that the defender reasonably believes to be done with the intention of kidnapping or abducting;
- (f) an assault that the defender reasonably believes to be done with the intention of wrongfully confining a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to believe that he will be unable to have opportunity for recourse to a public authority for his release.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death

103. If the offence is not of any of the descriptions mentioned in section 102, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in sections 98 and 106A, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

15

Right of private defence of property

Commencement and continuance of right of private defence of property

20

104.—(1) The right of private defence of property starts when the defender reasonably believes that there was a danger to property (either his own or that of any other person) arising from any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit such an offence.

25

(2) The right of private defence of property against theft continues till —

- (a) the offender has effected his retreat with the property;
- (b) the assistance of a public authority is obtained; or
- (c) the property has been recovered.

30

(3) The right of private defence of property against robbery continues as long as the offender causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint, or as long as the fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant personal restraint continues.

(4) The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief.

(5) The right of private defence of property against house-breaking continues as long as such house-breaking continues.

When right of private defence of property extends to causing death

105.—(1) The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in sections 98 and 106A, to the voluntary causing of death to the wrongdoer when the defender reasonably believes that there was a danger to property (either his own or that of any other person) arising from any of the following descriptions:

(a) robbery;

(b) house-breaking committed after 7 p.m. and before 7 a.m. and if the wrongdoer —

(i) effects his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the 6 ways described in subsection (2); or

(ii) being in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence, or having committed an offence therein, the wrongdoer leaves the house or any part of it in any of these 6 ways;

(c) mischief by fire committed on any building, tent, container or vessel, which building, tent, container or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property;

(d) theft, mischief or house-breaking, under such circumstances where the defender reasonably believes that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(b), the 6 ways of entry or leaving by a wrongdoer are as follows:

(a) if the wrongdoer enters or leaves through a passage made by the wrongdoer, or by any abettor of the house-breaking in order to commit the house-breaking;

10

(b) if the wrongdoer enters or leaves through any passage not intended by any person, other than the wrongdoer or an abettor of the offence, for human entrance, or through any passage to which the wrongdoer has obtained access by scaling or climbing over any wall or building;

15

(c) if the wrongdoer enters or leaves through any passage which the wrongdoer or any abettor of the house-breaking has opened, in order to commit the house-breaking, by any means by which that passage was not intended by the occupier of the house to be opened;

20

(d) if the wrongdoer enters or leaves by opening any lock in order to commit the house-breaking, or in order to leave from the house after a house-breaking;

25

(e) if the wrongdoer effects his entry or leaving by using criminal force or committing an assault, or by threatening any person with assault;

(f) if the wrongdoer enters or leaves by any passage which he knows to have been fastened against such entry or leaving, and to have been unfastened by himself or by an abettor of the house-breaking.

When such right extends to causing any harm other than death

5 106. If the offence, the committing or the attempt to commit of which occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, is theft, mischief, or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions mentioned in section 105, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in sections 98 and 106A, to the voluntary causing to the wrongdoer of any harm other than 10 death.

No right of private defence

Acts against which there is no right of private defence

15 106A.—(1) There is no right of private defence against an act which does not cause the defender to reasonably believe that death or grievous hurt would result, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under the actual or apparent authority of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.

20 (2) There is no right of private defence against an act which does not cause the defender to reasonably believe that death or grievous hurt would result, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under the actual or apparent authority of the public servant's office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

25 Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

30 Explanation 2.—A person (A) is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless A knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act (B) is acting by such direction; or unless B states the authority under which B acts, or, if B has authority in writing, unless B produces such authority, if demanded.”.

33. Section 107 of the Penal Code is amended —

(a) by renumbering the section as subsection (1) of that section, and by inserting immediately thereafter the following subsection (before Explanation 1):

“(2) A person may abet the doing of a thing despite the existence of facts of which he is unaware which make the doing of the thing impossible.”;

(b) by deleting the words “wilful misrepresentation, or by wilful” in Explanation 1 and substituting the words “intentional misrepresentation, or by intentional”; and

(2) Despite subsection (1), where the punishment prescribed for an offence mentioned in that subsection is fixed by law, or is a specified minimum sentence or a mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment or fine or caning, the court sentencing the person who abetted the offence —

(a) shall not be bound to impose the fixed, specified minimum or mandatory minimum sentence; and

(b) may sentence the abettor to such sentence or combination of sentences as the court thinks fit but not exceeding the maximum punishment prescribed for that offence.

(3) To avoid doubt, nothing in subsection (2)(b) empowers a court to impose a type of punishment that is not prescribed for an offence mentioned in subsection (1) or otherwise provided by any written law for that offence.

Illustrations

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B refuses to accept the bribe. A is punishable under this section for abetting the offence in section 161.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. Here, if B does not give false evidence, A has nevertheless committed the offence defined in this section, and is punishable accordingly.

Amendment of section 300

80. Section 300 of the Penal Code is amended —

- (a) by deleting proviso (b) of Exception 1 and substituting the following proviso:

“(b) that the offender did not know and had no reason to believe that the provocation was given by anything done in obedience to the law, or by a public servant in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant.”;

10

- (b) by deleting the Explanation to Exception 1 and substituting the following Explanations:

“Explanation 1.—Whether the provocation was grave and sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder is a question of fact, having regard to whether an ordinary person of the same gender and age as the offender, sharing such characteristics as would affect the gravity of the provocation and placed in the same situation as the offender, would be deprived of self-control by the provocation.

Explanation 2.—Grave and sudden provocation may be in the form of words, gestures or conduct or any combination of words, gestures or conduct.”;

- (c) by inserting, immediately after illustration (f) to Exception 1, the following illustration:

25

“(g) A and Z are married to each other. A loses self-control on Z’s provocation and intentionally kills Z soon after the provocation was given. Although the provocation, when viewed in isolation, would not amount to grave and sudden provocation, it was the last of a series of prolonged physical and mental abuse of A by Z. An ordinary person in A’s position would have lost self-control and have done what A did. A has committed only culpable homicide and not murder.”;

30

- (d) by deleting the words “in good faith” in Exception 2;

35

- (e) by inserting, immediately after Exception 2, the following Explanation:

“Explanation.—The word “premeditation” means the offender’s intention to cause death in section 300(a) or to cause such bodily injury as is mentioned in section 300(b) or (c) or the offender’s knowledge that the act is so imminently dangerous in the way mentioned in section 300(d).”;

(f) by inserting, immediately after Exception 3, the following proviso:

“The above exception is subject to the proviso that the offender did not know and had no reason to believe that the person whose death was caused was acting in obedience to the law, or was a public servant acting in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant.”;

(g) by renumbering the Explanation to Exception 4 as Explanation 1 of that Exception, and by inserting immediately thereafter the following Explanations and Illustrations:

“Explanation 2.—The word “fight” includes the exchange of blows even if the blows do not land on their target and includes a single blow or punch.

Explanation 3.—The word “premeditation” means the offender’s intention to cause death in section 300(a) or to cause such bodily injury as is mentioned in section 300(b) or (c) or the offender’s knowledge that the act is so imminently dangerous in the way mentioned in section 300(d).

Explanation 4.—A “quarrel” does not require a verbal exchange of words.

Illustrations

(a) A and Z, who are rival gang members, are in a coffee shop seated at different tables. They mutually stare at each other fiercely without exchanging any words. Z disengages from A by turning away and starts to leave the coffee shop. A sees a cutlery knife on his table which A had earlier used for A’s meal. A picks up the cutlery knife and stabs Z’s throat in the heat of passion. Z falls and dies almost immediately. Although there was a “sudden quarrel” without any exchange of words, Exception 4 does not apply because there was no “fight”, there being no exchange of blows or assault between A and Z.

(b) A had a consensual sexual relationship with Z until Z terminated the relationship. A came to Z’s house and asked Z if Z would have sex with A. Z refused. A became angry and said A would use force, if necessary. A grappled with Z who resisted A’s advances and struck A’s face. Enraged by Z’s resistance, A slams Z into a wall, and Z slumps to the ground. While Z is motionless on the ground, A kicks Z's head repeatedly and kills Z. Exception 4 does not apply because A had taken undue advantage of Z while Z was lying motionless on the ground.”;

- (h) by deleting the Illustration to Exception 5 and substituting the following Illustration: 5

“Illustration

A and Z, both being persons above 18 years of age, decide to commit suicide together by drinking poison. With Z's consent, A pours a lethal poison down Z's throat but after watching Z die, A cannot summon the courage to drink the same poison. A has committed culpable homicide and not murder.”; and 10

- (i) by deleting Exception 7 and substituting the following Exception:

*“Exception 7.—*Culpable homicide is not murder if at the time of the acts or omissions causing the death concerned, the offender was suffering from such abnormality of mind (whether arising from a condition of arrested or retarded development or any inherent causes or induced by disease or injury) as substantially — 15

(a) impaired the offender's capacity — 20

(i) to know the nature of the acts or omissions in causing the death or in being a party to causing the death; or

(ii) to know whether such acts or omissions are wrong (whether wrong by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons or as contrary to law); or 25

(b) impaired the offender's power to control his acts or omissions in causing the death or being a party to causing the death.”. 30

Amendment of section 301

81. The Penal Code is amended by renumbering section 301 as subsection (1) of that section, and by inserting immediately thereafter the following subsection: 35

“(2) To avoid doubt, in the circumstances mentioned in subsection (1), the accused person may rely on any defence or exception in law as though the accused person had caused the death of the person whose death he intended or knew himself to be likely to cause.”.

Amendment of section 304

Repeal and re-enactment of section 377C and new sections 377CA and 377CB

121. Section 377C of the Penal Code is repealed and the following sections substituted therefor:

(2) For the purposes of the definition of “distribute” in subsection (1), a person is treated as having distributed an image or recording whether or not another person views or gains access to the image.

5 (3) In sections 375 to 377BN —

(a) penetration is a continuing act from entry to withdrawal;

10 (b) a reference to a part of the body includes a reference to a part which is surgically constructed (in particular, through a sex reassignment procedure);

(c) for the purposes of identifying the sex of a person —

15 (i) the sex of a person as stated in that person’s identity card issued under the National Registration Act (Cap. 201) at the time the sexual activity took place is prima facie evidence of the sex of that person; and

Meaning of exploitative relationship

377CA.—(1) For the purposes of sections 375, 376, 376A, 376AA, 376EA, 376EC, 376EE, 377BL and 377D, whether an accused person’s relationship with a person below 18 years of age (called in this section a minor) is exploitative of the minor is to be determined by the court in the circumstances of each case and the court must have regard to the following in making such determination: 15

- (a) the age of the minor; 20
- (b) the difference between the age of the accused person and the minor;
- (c) the nature of the relationship;
- (d) the degree of control or influence exercised by the accused person over the minor. 25

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1) and subject to subsection (3), it is presumed until the contrary is proved that an accused person’s relationship with a minor is exploitative where the relationship is any of the following:

- (a) the accused person is the parent, step-parent, guardian or foster parent of the minor; 30
- (b) the accused person is the de facto partner of the parent, guardian or foster parent of the minor;

- (c) the accused person is a member of the teaching or management staff of the school or educational institution at which the minor is a student;

- (e) the accused person is a custodial officer of an institution in which the minor is detained;
- 10 (f) the accused person is a registered medical practitioner, a registered traditional Chinese medicine practitioner or a psychologist and the minor is a patient of the accused person;
- 15 (g) the accused person is an advocate and solicitor or a counsellor and the minor is a client of the accused person.

(3) The presumption in subsection (2) does not apply to a person who is lawfully married to a minor even though the relationship may fall within any of the relationships mentioned in subsection (2).

Consent given under misconception in sexual offences

377CB.—(1) Despite section 90(a)(ii), a consent for the purposes of an act which is the physical element of a sexual offence is not a consent given by a person under a misconception of fact only if it is directly related to —

25

- (a) the nature of the act, namely that it is not of a sexual nature;
- (b) the purpose of the act, namely that it is not for a sexual purpose; or
- 30 (c) the identity of the person doing the act, and the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such misconception.

(2) In subsection (1) —

“sexual” has the meaning given by section 377C(3);

“sexual offence” means any offence where the physical element of the offence under this Code or any other written law involves an act of a sexual nature and includes but is not limited to any offence under sections 375 to 377BN.

Illustrations

(a) A deceives B into allowing him to penetrate her vagina by inducing the misconception that he is extracting an evil spirit from B’s body. B believes A and thinks that what she has consented to is a procedure to extract an evil spirit, not sexual intercourse. B has given her consent under a misconception as to the sexual nature of the act. B’s apparent consent is therefore not a valid consent.

10

(b) A deceives B into believing that he can heal B’s chronic disease by treatment involving sexual penetration. B gives her consent under the misconception that the act is treatment for a health purpose and not for a sexual purpose. B’s apparent consent is therefore not a valid consent.

15

(c) A deceives B into believing that A is her husband. A is an imposter. B consents to sexual intercourse with A because she believes A is her husband. B’s consent is given under a misconception of the identity of A and is therefore not a valid consent.

20

(d) A deceives B into believing that A is an influential movie director. A is in fact only an administrative assistant to that movie director. B consents to sexual intercourse with A because she believes A is that movie director. B’s misconception is as to A’s attributes and not of A’s identity. B’s consent is therefore a valid consent.”.

25

Repeal and re-enactment of section 377D

122. Section 377D of the Penal Code is repealed and the following section and Explanation substituted therefor:

“Mistake as to age in sexual offences

30

377D.—(1) Subject to subsections (2) and (3) and despite section 79, a reasonable mistake as to the age of a person cannot be a defence to any charge for a sexual offence.

(2) The presence of a reasonable mistaken belief that a minor was of or above 18 years of age is a valid defence to a charge for a sexual offence where the fact that a minor is of or above the age of 16 years but below 18 years is a physical element of the offence.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2), the defence under that subsection is no longer available if at the time of the offence, the person charged with that offence —

(a) has previously been charged in court for an offence under section 375(1)(a), 375(1A)(b), 376(1), 376(2), 376A, 376AA, 376B, 376C, 376E, 376EA, 376EB, 376EC, 376ED, 376EE, 377BG, 377BH, 377BI, 377BJ, 377BK or 377BL or section 7 of the Children and Young Persons Act or section 140(1)(i) or 145(1) of the Women’s Charter; or

(b) failed to take all reasonable steps to verify that the minor was of or above 18 years of age.

Explanation.—The fact that the minor was observed to be participating in activities which are restricted to persons of or above 18 years of age, such as smoking a cigarette or admission to premises with access restricted to persons of or above 18 years of age (such as a nightclub) is neither sufficient to constitute a reasonable basis for the mistaken belief nor reasonable steps to verify that minor’s age.

(4) In this section, “sexual offence” has the meaning given by section 377CB.”.

35 (c) When Z is not looking, A opens Z's bag and takes away an electronic device with the intention of stealing it from Z. A genuinely believes that the electronic device belongs to Z but it in fact belongs to A, who had previously lent it to Z. A is guilty of attempted theft even though it was not possible for A to have committed theft of A's own device.

(d) A and Z are friends who share a room in which Z keeps a personal safe with a combination lock. A peeps at Z opening the safe in order to memorise the combination code to the safe. When Z is out of the room, A attempts to remember the code to unlock Z's safe with the intention of stealing the cash in the safe. A tries several times but is unable to remember the code correctly before Z returns. A is guilty of an offence of attempted theft even though he could not have opened the safe because of his inept memory of the code. 5

A attempts to commit kidnapping of B in order that B may be murdered but did not succeed. If A had committed kidnapping in order to murder, he would have been punished with death or imprisonment for life (and would, if not sentenced to death, also be liable to caning). A shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 20 years, and shall also be liable to fine or to caning. 20

(2) Subject to subsection (3), any person who attempts to commit an offence punishable by this Code or by any other written law (other than an offence mentioned in subsection (1)), shall, where no express provision is made by this Code or by such other written law for the punishment of such attempt, be punished with such punishment as is prescribed for that offence. 25

(3) Despite subsection (2), where the punishment prescribed for an offence mentioned in subsection (1) is fixed by law, a specified minimum sentence or a mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment or fine or caning, the court sentencing the person who attempted to commit the offence — 30

(a) shall not be bound to impose such fixed, specified or mandatory minimum sentence; and 35

(b) may sentence the offender to such sentence or combination of sentences as the court thinks fit but not exceeding the maximum punishment prescribed for that offence.

5 (4) To avoid doubt, nothing in subsection (3)(b) empowers a court to impose a type of punishment that is not prescribed for an offence mentioned in subsection (1) or otherwise provided by any written law for that offence.

Illustration

10 A attempts to commit robbery but did not succeed. If A had committed robbery, he would have been subject to a mandatory minimum term of imprisonment of not less than 2 years and mandatory caning of a minimum of 6 strokes. As the court is not bound to impose the minimum mandatory punishment prescribed for robbery, A may be sentenced to 6 months imprisonment with no caning for attempted robbery. However, the court may not sentence A to a fine, as this is not a prescribed punishment for robbery but the court may sentence A to probation if he is a young offender.”.

(s) by inserting, immediately after section 303, the following section:

15 303A.—(1) This section applies where a presumptive minimum sentence is prescribed for an offence under any written law, which is denoted by the words “imprisonment for a presumptive minimum term of not less than” or words to the same or similar effect.

20 (2) The court must, unless subsection (3) applies, impose a sentence that is equal to or greater than the presumptive minimum sentence prescribed for that offence.

25 (3) Where the court is satisfied that by reason of exceptional circumstances it would be unjust to impose on a first-time offender the presumptive minimum sentence prescribed for an offence the first-time offender is convicted of, the court must impose a sentence of the same type of punishment but that is less than the presumptive minimum sentence prescribed for that offence.

30 (4) In any written law, unless the context requires otherwise, a reference to a mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment shall include a reference to a presumptive minimum sentence mentioned in subsection (1).

(5) In this section, “first-time offender”, in relation to an offence, means a person who does not fall within any of the following descriptions: 5

(a) a person who had previously been sentenced to a term of imprisonment for any offence, other than a term of imprisonment served by him in default of payment of a fine; 10

(b) a person who had previously been sentenced to reformatory training, corrective training or preventive detention, for any offence;

(c) a person who had previously been detained or subject to police supervision under section 30 of the Criminal Law (Temporary Provisions) Act (Cap. 67); 15

(d) a person who had previously been admitted to an approved institution under section 34 of the Misuse of Drugs Act (Cap. 185) or to an approved centre under section 17 of the Intoxicating Substances Act (Cap. 146A). 20

Explanation.—The circumstances must be so exceptional as to make it unjust to impose the presumptive minimum sentence for an offence and outweigh the public interests in punishing the offender with the presumptive minimum sentence. The mere presence of all or any of the following mitigating circumstances will not be sufficient to constitute “exceptional circumstances”: 25

(a) the offender pleaded guilty to the offence;

(b) the offender is a first-time offender;

(c) the offender is of previous good character. 30

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

This Bill seeks to amend the Penal Code (Cap. 224), the Criminal Procedure Code (Cap. 68), the Children and Young Persons Act (Cap. 38), the Women’s Charter (Cap. 353) and certain other Acts to update the criminal offences, keep up with technological changes and emerging crime trends, enhance protection for minors and vulnerable victims, harmonise the criminal laws and update the sentencing framework.

The Bill also makes related and consequential amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code, the Evidence Act (Cap. 97) and certain other Acts.

Clause 1 relates to the short title and commencement.

PART 1

AMENDMENTS TO PENAL CODE

Part 1 (clauses 2 to 168) amends the Penal Code. Unless the context otherwise requires, any reference in this Explanatory Statement to a section, Part, Division or Schedule by number only, and not in conjunction with the short title of an Act, is a reference to the section, Part, Division or Schedule of that number contained in the Penal Code.

Clause 2 inserts new sections 4A and 4B.

The new section 4A extends the application of the offences in Chapters VI (Offences against the State) and VIB (Genocide) to acts and omissions by Singapore citizens and permanent residents outside Singapore. Singapore citizens and permanent residents who commit such offences outside Singapore can be prosecuted and tried in Singapore.

The new section 4B is to be read with the new Schedule. The new Schedule specifies offences under which the Singapore courts will have jurisdiction where any physical element of the offence that takes the form of a relevant event occurs in Singapore or where a fault element of the offence is to make a gain or cause a loss or exposure to a risk of loss or cause harm to any person in body, mind, reputation or property, and that gain, loss or harm occurs in Singapore.

Clause 3 makes technical and consequential amendments to section 6.

Clause 4 inserts a new section 6A to provide that the definitions in the new sections 22A to 26H (except for “dishonestly” and “fraudulently”) apply to offences in other written law in addition to offences in the Penal Code.

Clause 5 amends the definition of “public servant” in section 21 to expand the definition to cover —

- (a) officers and employees of body corporates established by a public Act for a public function (commonly called statutory boards); and

- (b) persons who are employed by contractors engaged to perform certain duties on behalf of the Government or a statutory board, such as law enforcement functions and escorting persons in remand and prisoners.

Clause 6 repeals and re-enacts section 22 to set out a comprehensive definition of “property” which will cover intangible and incorporeal property. The definitions are similar to those in the Interpretation Act (Cap. 1) except that virtual currency such as cryptocurrency will be included in the definition of “property”.

The clause also inserts a new section 22A which will introduce new definitions of “fault element” and “physical element” (sometimes known as mens rea and actus reus elements, respectively). Definitions of the various fault elements will either be clarified or codified.

Clause 7 repeals and re-enacts sections 23, 24 and 25 to insert new definitions of “wrongful gain” and “wrongful loss”, “dishonestly” and “fraudulently”. The new definitions of “wrongful gain” and “wrongful loss” in section 23 will include the wrongful avoidance of a loss or exposure of another to the risk of loss.

The new definition of “dishonestly” in section 24 will include situations where the wrongful gain or wrongful loss is dishonest by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons, and the offender knows that the act is dishonest by such standards. It also explicitly covers both temporary and permanent gain and loss.

The new definition of “fraudulently” in section 25 will codify the common law definition of “fraudulently” in Law Society of Singapore v Nor 'ain bte Abu Bakar and others [2008] SGHC 169. The case held that “a person is said to do a thing with intent to defraud if he does that thing with the intention to deceive some person and by means of such deception, that an advantage should accrue to or detriment should befall some person”.

Clause 8 inserts new sections 26A to 26H. The current definitions of “voluntarily” in section 39 and “good faith” in section 52 are re-enacted substantially unchanged as the new sections 26A and 26B, respectively, so that they are located together with the other sections on the fault elements.

The fault elements of “intentionally”, “knowingly”, “rashly”, “negligently”, “transferred fault” and “strict liability” are defined in the new sections 26C to 26H, respectively.

The words “real risk” in the new section 26E (which is relevant to the definition of “rashly”) means a risk of adverse consequences arising from one’s conduct that is not “merely theoretical or fanciful” as explained in Public Prosecutor v Hue An Li [2014] SGHC 171 at [65].

The new section 26H codifies the common law definition of “strict liability”. Under the common law, a strict liability offence is one which does not have any fault elements that need to be proven to establish liability. However, case law has established that a common law defence of reasonable care applies to strict liability offences. In a prosecution for a strict liability offence, it is a defence for the accused person to prove that in doing anything or omitting to do anything specified in the offence, the accused exercised reasonable care.

Clause 9 amends section 30 to extend the definition of “valuable security” to include electronic records with a new Illustration relating to electronic bills of lading.

Clause 10 amends section 33 to clarify that the physical elements of an offence can be constituted by a series of acts. This would especially be relevant in the context of homicide where it is not clear which injury out of a series of multiple injuries inflicted on a victim caused the victim’s death.

Clause 11 repeals section 39 on the definition of “voluntarily” which will be re-enacted as the new section 26A in order to locate it together with the other related provisions on the fault elements of an offence.

Clause 12 makes a consequential and technical amendment to section 40.

Clause 13 inserts a new section 44A to clarify that the words “bodily injury” denotes as well a series of bodily injuries as a single bodily injury.

Clause 14 repeals section 52 on the definition of “good faith” which will be re-enacted as the new section 26B in order to locate it together with the other related provisions about fault elements of an offence.

Clause 15 repeals and re-enacts section 73 for the following purposes:

- (a) to change the term from “domestic maid” to “domestic worker” but the definition remains the same;
- (b) to extend the enhanced punishment for offences against domestic workers to cover all offences in the Penal Code which could be committed against an individual person;
- (c) to increase the enhancement of maximum punishments for such offences from one-and-a-half to 2 times except where the offence is punishable with death or imprisonment for life;
- (d) to expand the scope of offenders caught by the enhanced punishments under section 73 to include employment agents of domestic workers.

Clause 16 makes technical amendments to section 74(2) and (3).

Clause 17 amends section 74A for the following purposes:

- (a) to extend the enhanced punishment for offences against vulnerable persons to cover all offences in the Penal Code which could be committed against an individual;

- (b) to increase the enhancement of maximum punishments for such offences from one-and-a-half to 2 times except for section 376F and offences punishable with death or imprisonment for life;
- (c) to change the term from “vulnerable adult” to “vulnerable person” and remove the age requirement of at least 18 years old. The threshold of vulnerability will also be lowered from “incapable of protecting themselves from abuse, neglect or self-neglect” to “substantially unable to protect themselves from abuse, neglect or self-neglect”. This would cover situations where victims may be capable of caring for their day-to-day affairs, but could be more susceptible to crime and abuse due to some mental or physical disability or infirmity.

Clause 18 inserts new sections 74B to 74E.

The new section 74B provides for enhanced maximum punishments up to twice the maximum punishment for offences under the Penal Code committed against children below 14 years of age unless there is already an enhanced or mandatory minimum sentence provided for or if the punishment is death or life imprisonment.

The new sections 74C and 74D provide for enhanced maximum punishments for offences under Chapter XVI committed against a person who was in an intimate or a close relationship with the offender, respectively, except where the offence is punishable with death or imprisonment for life.

The new section 74E clarifies that if 2 or more of the enhanced punishment provisions in sections 73 to 74D can apply to the same offence, only one provision will apply. Those provisions will also not enhance a specified minimum sentence or mandatory minimum sentence of imprisonment or caning.

Clause 19 repeals section 75 as this section is of limited application today. Persons who commit repeat offences may be sentenced to corrective training and preventive detention under section 304 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Clause 20 repeals and re-enacts section 76 to set out the defence of acts done by a person bound by law or justified by law in a standalone provision, separate from the defence of “mistake of fact”.

Clause 21 repeals and re-enacts section 79 to set out the defence of “mistake of fact” in a standalone provision, separate from the defence of “mistake of law”. This defence will apply to all offences, except where expressly excluded by any written law. The amendment will also clarify that the defence applies to both mistake of fact and ignorance of fact. It is also clarified to avoid doubt that when a mistake of fact or ignorance of a fact negates the fault element required to establish liability under an offence, then the offence is not made out.

Clause 22 inserts a new section 79A to preserve the general exclusionary rule at common law that a mistake of law or ignorance of the law does not provide a defence to a criminal charge.

It is also clarified to avoid doubt that if a mistake of law negates the fault element required to establish liability under an offence, then that offence is not made out.

Clause 23 amends section 80 on the defence of accident to remove the words “and without any criminal intention or knowledge”. The phrase is redundant in light of the requirement that the accident must arise in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner and by lawful means. An explanation is also added to clarify that the phrase “lawful act” means “any act that is not an offence or which is not prohibited by law”. It is also clarified to avoid doubt that when the facts which are relied upon to establish this defence will, when proven, negate the fault element required to establish liability under an offence, then it is not required to rely on the defence.

Clause 24 amends section 81 on the defence of necessity to remove the condition that the act be done “without any criminal intention to cause harm”. The proviso, if extended to oblique intention (i.e. intention constituted by foresight of an outcome with virtual certainty) to cause harm in order to prevent other harm, may render the defence unworkable because it may be excessively wide.

Clause 25 amends section 82 to raise the minimum age of criminal responsibility from 7 to 10 years. A child below 10 years of age will not be capable of committing a criminal offence.

Clause 26 amends section 83 which is consequential to the raising of minimum age of criminal responsibility to 10 years. A child of or above 10 years of age but below 12 years, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge the nature and consequence of his conduct on that occasion does not commit a criminal offence.

Clause 27 repeals and re-enacts section 84 on the defence of “unsoundness of mind”. The defence of unsoundness of mind is expanded to include cases where the accused person by reason of the mental disorder was completely deprived of any power to control his actions. The amendment also clarifies that the defence is not available to an accused person if he or she is capable of knowing that what he or she is doing is either wrong by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons or wrong as being contrary to law.

Clause 28 amends section 85 on the defence of intoxication so that an accused person can only rely on the defence if the state of intoxication was caused without the knowledge or against the will of the person charged.

Clause 29 amends section 86(1) so that it applies to the accused person suffering from an intoxication-induced mental disorder having a degree of permanence which requires treatment. Section 86(2) is also amended to provide that intoxication must be taken into account in determining the accused's "knowledge" or "belief" in addition to just "intention". This addresses the anomaly mentioned in Juma'at bin Samad v Public Prosecutor [1993] SGHC 145 at [21]. This includes the law articulated at [22] of Juma'at that the burden of proof falls on the accused person to prove on a balance of probabilities that he was so intoxicated that he did not form the necessary intention for the offence. The amendment does not change the law reflected in Juma'at in other respects.

Clause 30 makes technical amendments relating to the Chapter headings and sub-headings relating to the right of private defence.

Clause 31 makes a consequential amendment to section 97 to renumber the cross-references.

Clause 32 repeals and re-enacts sections 98 to 106 and introduces a new section 106A. These sections re-organise the provisions on the right of private defence into 2 broad categories of the right of private defence of person and defence of property. The condition of "time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities" is rephrased as "reasonable opportunity to have recourse to the protection of a public authority in the circumstances" (new section 98(2)). The "reasonable apprehension of danger" test in private defence is recast as a subjective-objective test, i.e. the defender reasonably believed that certain danger existed or certain consequences would result or were intended from the actions of the victim. The common law requirement that the use of force in private defence must be "reasonably necessary in the circumstances" and not merely necessary is also codified. The new section 102(c) will provide that defensive deadly force will be allowed for assaults with the intention of committing the offence of rape which has been expanded in section 375 or causing such rape to be committed. The new section 102(d) will provide that defensive deadly force will be allowed for assaults with the intention of committing penile penetration of the vagina, anus or mouth as described in section 376(1) or (2).

Clause 33 amends section 107 to clarify that inchoate liability can arise for impossible abetments, i.e. abetment of an act of which the person is unaware is impossible.

Clause 34 amends section 115 to increase the punishments in that section.

Clause 35 repeals and re-enacts section 116 to provide that the prescribed punishment for abetment of principal offences which were not actually committed will be the same as the punishment for the offence abetted. The exception to this general rule is that where the offence abetted is punishable with death or life imprisonment, the abettor is liable to be punished with up to 20 years' imprisonment, fine or caning. The court is also not bound to impose sentences for the principal offences which are fixed by law, a specified minimum sentence or a mandatory minimum sentence.

Clause 36 repeals and re-enacts sections 120A and 120B.

The new section 120A clarifies that criminal conspiracies cover conspiracies in Singapore to commit offences outside Singapore (which would be an offence if committed in Singapore) and conspiracies outside Singapore to commit offences in Singapore. A person may be a party to a criminal conspiracy even though any other party to the conspiracy does not intend to carry out the agreement to commit the offence or cause the offence to be committed.

The new section 120B provides for the punishment for criminal conspiracy where no express provision is made in the Code for such punishment.

Clauses 37 to 45 amend sections 121, 121A, 121B, 122, 124, 125, 128, 130 and 131, respectively, to remove the punishment of fine when life imprisonment is imposed.

Clause 46 amends section 132 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment or death.

Clause 47 amends section 136 to repeal the marital exception to a wife for harbouring her husband who is a deserter from the Singapore Armed Forces or any visiting forces lawfully present in Singapore. A requirement is also inserted that the accused person must have harboured the deserter with the intention of preventing the deserter from being apprehended.

Clause 48 amends section 137 to clarify that the punishment prescribed is mandatory being the only punishment prescribed in that section.

Clause 49 amends section 157 to insert a requirement that the accused person must have harboured the potential members of an unlawful assembly with the intention of permitting or facilitating them to join or become members of an unlawful assembly or screening them or any of them from punishment.

Clause 50 amends section 172 to update the punishment in that section relating to absconding to avoid arrest on warrant or service of summons, etc., proceeding from a public servant.

Clause 51 repeals and re-enacts sections 173 to 177 relating to offences with respect to contempt of the lawful authority of public servants to update the punishments for most of the offences in those sections and to provide for a higher punishment if the offence is one which may be committed by a corporation or other corporate entity.

Clause 52 amends section 178 to increase the amount of fine.

Clause 53 repeals and re-enacts section 179 relating to refusing to answer a public servant authorised to question to update the punishment and to provide for a higher punishment if the offence is one which may be committed by a corporation or other corporate entity.

Clause 54 amends section 182 to update the punishment in the section relating to offences with respect to contempt of the lawful authority of public servants.

Clause 55 repeals and re-enacts sections 183 to 188 relating to offences with respect to contempt of the lawful authority of public servants to update the punishments in those sections and to provide for a higher punishment if the offence is one which may be committed by a corporation or other corporate entity.

Clause 56 amends section 194 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 57 amends section 195 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment and to provide for a maximum 20 years' imprisonment sentence if the offender gives or fabricates false evidence, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence which is punishable with life imprisonment.

Clause 58 makes a technical amendment to the cross-references in section 203.

Clause 59 repeals and re-enacts section 204A on obstructing, preventing, perverting or defeating the course of justice to widen the fault element from intention to knowledge that the accused person's act is likely to have the effect of obstructing, preventing, perverting or defeating the course of justice. This is to prevent technical defences concerning intention where an act has been committed that objectively obstructs or perverts the course of justice.

Clause 60 repeals section 209 (Fraudulently or dishonestly making a false claim before a court of justice) as it is no longer relevant today as observed by the High Court in Bachoo Mohan Singh v Public Prosecutor [2010] SGCA 25.

Clause 61 amends section 212 to repeal the marital exception to a person for harbouring or concealing his or her spouse who has committed certain offences with the intention of screening him or her from legal punishment. Two Illustrations have been inserted to clarify that a spouse will not be guilty of harbouring if he or she provided food and shelter to his or her spouse without the requisite intention to screen the spouse from punishment.

Clause 62 amends section 216 to repeal the marital exception to a person for harbouring or concealing his or her spouse who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered with the intention of preventing the spouse from being apprehended.

Clause 63 amends section 216A to repeal the marital exception to a person for harbouring his or her spouse with the intention of facilitating the commission by the spouse of robbery or gang-robbery or of screening the spouse from legal punishment.

Clause 64 makes a technical amendment to the heading to Chapter XII.

Clause 65 repeals sections 230 to 254A on offences relating to coins and current coins. These offences will be subsumed and combined in Chapter XVII with offences relating to currency and bank notes.

Clause 66 repeals the whole of Chapter XIII on offences relating to weights and measures (sections 264 to 267) to avoid unnecessary overlap with other offences in the Code or other Acts. The circumstances in which the offences in these sections would be made out would be caught by the Weights and Measures Act (Cap. 349) or other cheating or fraud offences in the Code.

Clause 67 inserts new sections 268A, 268B and 268C.

The new section 268A creates an offence of transmission or communication of false information of the presence of any thing that is likely to cause hurt or damage to property by a person who knows that such information is false or fabricated. A related amendment will be made to repeal section 45 of the Telecommunications Act (Cap. 323) which contains a similar provision (see clause 187).

The new section 268B creates an offence of placing or sending without reasonable excuse any thing with the intention of inducing a belief that the thing is likely to cause hurt or damage to property by any means.

The new section 268C creates a similar offence to the new section 268B except that the fault element is of lower culpability namely only knowledge of a real risk that it will cause belief of harm rather than intention to induce a belief of harm. The maximum punishment for this offence is accordingly lower than that for the new section 268B.

Clauses 68 and 69 amend sections 272 and 273, respectively, to enhance the penalties for offences relating to adulterated food.

Clauses 70, 71 and 72 amend sections 274, 275 and 276, respectively, to enhance the penalties for offences relating to adulterated drugs.

Clause 73 amends section 277 to enhance the penalties for offences relating to fouling the water of a public spring or reservoir.

Clause 74 amends section 278 to enhance the penalties for offences relating to making the atmosphere noxious to health.

Clause 75 repeals and re-enacts sections 284 to 289.

The new section 284 is re-enacted to create the offence of rash or negligent conduct or omission to take sufficient safeguards, with respect to any dangerous or harmful substance, that endangers human life, or is likely to or results in certain harmful consequences. The punishments are enhanced for situations where the negligent or rash conduct causes hurt, grievous hurt or death.

The new section 285 is re-enacted to create the offence of causing or contributing to the risk of dangerous fire that results in certain harmful consequences. The punishments are calibrated in accordance with the degree of harm or risk of harm caused. The punishments are enhanced for situations where the fire causes hurt, grievous hurt or death.

The new section 286 is re-enacted to introduce a new rebuttable presumption that a person substantially contributed to the risk of causing fire where that person throws a cigarette, cigar, match stick, charcoal, incense, or any form of embers or any thing that is likely to cause fire in any place, and a fire occurs at that place or in the vicinity of that place within 60 minutes from the time of that act.

The new section 287 is re-enacted to provide for enhanced punishments where the negligent or rash conduct with respect to machinery in the possession or care of the offender endangers human life or results in certain harmful consequences such as hurt, grievous hurt or death. The punishments are enhanced for situations where the negligent or rash conduct causes hurt, grievous hurt or death.

The new section 288 is re-enacted to provide for enhanced punishments for failure to take sufficient safeguards against any probable danger to human life or results in death with respect to the pulling down or repairing of any building.

The new section 289 is re-enacted to provide for enhanced punishments for failure to take sufficient safeguards against any probable danger to human life or results in grievous hurt or death from an animal in a person's possession.

Clause 76 repeals and re-enacts section 290 to enhance the penalties for offences relating to public nuisance including introducing a discretionary sentence of imprisonment for repeat offenders and offenders who knew that their act of public nuisance will cause or will probably cause any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public, or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity.

Clause 77 amends section 292 to provide for enhanced punishment where the obscene object depicts or is implied to depict the image of a minor below 16 years of age.

Clause 78 inserts a new section 292A that creates a new offence of possession, importation, distribution, etc., of a child sex-doll.

Clause 79 amends section 294 on obscene songs to update the archaic language.

Clause 80 makes the following amendments to section 300 in relation to the partial defences to murder:

- (a) insert in proviso (b) to Exception 1 a requirement that the offender did not know and had no reason to believe that the provocation was given by anything done in obedience to the law, or by a public servant in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant;

- (b) amend the Explanation to Exception 1 to codify the test of “the ordinary person of the same gender and age as the offender” for determining whether the provocation was grave and sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder;
- (c) insert a new Explanation 2 to Exception 1 to clarify that grave and sudden provocation may be in the form of words, gestures or conduct or any combination of words, gestures or conduct;
- (d) insert a new Illustration to Exception 1 to clarify that cumulative provocation over a period of time may amount to grave provocation;
- (e) delete the phrase “in good faith” from Exception 2 as it has caused difficulties in interpretation and as the defence in Exception 2 already contains other pre-requisites which are sufficient to exclude undeserving cases;
- (f) insert a new Explanation to Exception 2 to clarify that the word “premeditation” relates to the fault elements for murder under section 300;
- (g) insert a new proviso to Exception 3 that the offender did not know and had no reason to believe that the person whose death was caused was acting in obedience to the law, or was a public servant acting in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant;
- (h) insert a new Explanation 2 to Exception 4 to clarify that the word “fight” includes the exchange of blows even if the blows do not land on their target and includes a single blow or punch;
- (i) insert a new Explanation 3 to Exception 4 to clarify that the word “premeditation” relates to the fault elements for murder under section 300;
- (j) insert a new Explanation 4 to Exception 4 to clarify that a quarrel does not require verbal exchange of words;
- (k) insert new Illustrations to Exception 4 to exemplify situations where the partial defence of sudden fight is not available;
- (l) repeal and re-enact the Illustration to Exception 5 (Consent) as the current Illustration appears to suggest that a person who has committed suicide has murdered himself;
- (m) amend Exception 7 to define diminished responsibility in terms of an abnormality of mind that substantially impaired the offender’s capacity (a) to know the nature of the acts or omissions or (b) to judge whether such acts or omissions are wrong (whether wrong by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest persons or as contrary to law); or (c) that impaired the offender's power to control his acts or omissions.

Clause 81 amends section 301 by renumbering the section as subsection (1) and by inserting a new subsection (2) to clarify for the avoidance of doubt that the accused person may rely on certain defences and exceptions.

Clause 82 amends section 304(b) to enhance the imprisonment punishment for culpable homicide without intention to cause death, or to cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death.

Clause 83 inserts new sections 304B and 304C.

The new section 304B creates a new offence of causing the death of any child below 14 years of age, domestic worker or vulnerable person by sustained abuse. The term "sustained abuse" is defined to mean a course of conduct which consists of voluntarily causing hurt or knowingly causing neglect or both, of the victim on 2 or more occasions or on a single occasion if the conduct is protracted.

The new section 304C creates a new offence of causing or allowing the death of a child below 14 years of age or vulnerable person in the same household.

Clause 84 repeals and re-enacts section 305 to enhance the punishment for abetment of suicide or attempted suicide of a minor below 18 years of age or a person who lacks mental capacity. It also replaces certain archaic phrases and introduce an additional requirement that the abettor knew or had reason to believe that the person who attempted or committed suicide was below 18 years of age or lacked mental capacity.

Clause 85 amends section 306 to make it an offence to abet attempted suicide in addition to abetment of suicide, even though attempted suicide will no longer be an offence.

Clause 86 amends section 307 to provide that attempted murder can only be committed if the accused person had the intention to cause death and not merely knowledge that death is likely to be caused and to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 87 amends section 308 to provide that attempted culpable homicide can only be committed if the accused person had the intention to cause death and not merely knowledge that death is likely to be caused.

Clause 88 inserts new sections 308A and 308B.

The new section 308A creates a new offence of causing death in furtherance of a group's common object. A person who is or acts as a member of a group commits an offence if he or she knows that the group has a common object to commit an offence or that a weapon is likely or will be used in any manner against another person; and subsequently the death of that other person is caused in furtherance of the group's object.

The new section 308B creates a new offence of intentional concealment, desecration or disposal of a human corpse which has the effect of impeding or preventing the discovery or identification of the corpse or criminal investigations or prosecutions.

Clause 89 repeals section 309 to abolish the offence of attempted suicide.

Clause 90 amends section 310 to replace the word "wilful" with "intentional".

Clause 91 amends section 311 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 92 amends section 312 on causing miscarriage to replace the archaic language "quick with child" with the phrase "pregnancy is of more than 16 weeks' duration as calculated in accordance with section 4 of that Act" (namely the Termination of Pregnancy Act (Cap. 324)).

Clause 93 amends section 313 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 94 amends section 315(1) to replace the word "wilful" with "intentional".

Clause 95 makes a technical amendment to section 323 consequential to the new section 323A and to increase the term of imprisonment to allow for the full spectrum of aggravating factors to be taken into account across the entire sentencing range.

Clause 96 inserts a new section 323A which creates a new offence of voluntarily causing hurt which results in grievous hurt being caused instead. This offence operates where there was no intention to cause grievous hurt. A similar offence in section 334A is also created (see clause 103).

Clause 97 makes an amendment to section 324 to replace the word "deleterious" with the word "harmful".

Clause 98 makes a technical amendment to section 325 consequential to the new sections 323A and 334A and to increase the term of imprisonment.

Clause 99 amends section 326 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 100 amends section 328 to replace the phrase "unwholesome drug or other thing" with the phrase "any substance which it is harmful to the human body to inhale, to swallow, or to receive into the blood" to clarify the intent of the provision, which is only to criminalise the use of substances that are intoxicating or harmful to the human body.

Clause 101 amends section 332 on voluntarily causing hurt to a public servant to provide that an imprisonment term must be imposed unless there are exceptional circumstances.

Clause 102 amends section 334 to enhance punishments for voluntarily causing hurt on provocation.

Clause 103 inserts a new section 334A which is similar to the new section 323A of voluntarily causing hurt on grave and sudden provocation which results in grievous hurt being caused instead. This offence operates where there was no intention to cause grievous hurt.

Clause 104 inserts new sections 335A and 335B.

The new section 335A provides for an offence of allowing the neglect or sexual abuse of, the hurt or grievous hurt to, or any injury to the mental health of, a domestic worker or vulnerable person, where the accused person knew or had reason to believe that the victim was at risk of such neglect, sexual abuse, hurt, grievous hurt, or injury to mental health caused by another person. In the case of a domestic worker, this offence applies to the employer, a member of the employer's household or an employment agent of the domestic worker. In the case of a vulnerable person, this offence applies to a person who has the custody, charge or care of the vulnerable person.

The new section 335B provides for an offence of doing any act, that endangers human life or the personal safety of others, with the knowledge or belief that such act is likely to cause death.

Clause 105 amends section 342 to increase the maximum punishment for wrongful confinement in the light of the repeal of sections 343 and 344 (see clause 106).

Clause 106 repeals sections 343 and 344 as the periods of 3 days' and 10 days' wrongful confinement as aggravating factors for punishment are arbitrary. With the repeal, wrongful confinement offences will fall under section 342 which will have an increased punishment equivalent to that under section 344.

Clause 107 amends section 361 on kidnapping from lawful guardianship to abolish the age differences for male and female victims so that all minors below 16 years of age are protected regardless of gender.

Clause 108 amends section 367 to include non-consensual penile penetration of the mouth in addition to such penetration of the anus as an element of the offence of kidnapping or abducting in order to subject a person to grievous hurt, slavery, etc.

Clause 109 repeals section 369 on kidnapping or abducting a child below 10 years of age with intent to steal movable property from the child. This offence is of limited relevance today and in any case would be covered under section 361

(Kidnapping from lawful guardianship) punishable under section 363, which carries the same punishment.

Clause 110 amends section 375 to extend the scope of rape to penile penetration of a woman's or a man's anus or mouth. The limited marital immunity to rape in section 375(4) is also abolished. The amendment will also introduce enhanced punishment for exploitative rape of a minor below 14 years of age. A defence will be provided for sexual penetration of a spouse below 14 years of age with the spouse's consent. However, this should be read with section 90(c) which provides that a person below 12 years of age cannot provide consent.

Clause 111 amends section 376 to expand the offence of non-consensual sexual penetration to include situations where a woman forces a man to sexually penetrate her vagina, anus, or mouth. The section will no longer catch penile penetration of a woman's or a man's anus or mouth as this offence will be caught under section 375. The amendment will also introduce enhanced punishment for exploitative penetrative sexual activity with a minor below 14 years of age. A defence will be provided for sexual penetration of a spouse below 14 years of age with the spouse's consent. However, this should be read with section 90(c) which provides that a person below 12 years of age cannot provide consent.

Clause 112 amends section 376A to clarify that section 376A (Sexual penetration of minor under 16) does not cover sexual activity for minors below 16 years of age where the minor did not consent. The upper ranges of the prescribed sentences for an offence under that section will therefore apply to consensual sexual penetration of minors below 16 years of age with higher maximum punishments where the minors are below 14 years of age. The amendment also introduces enhanced punishment for exploitative penetrative sexual activity with minors at least 14 but below 16 years of age. The limited marital immunity to sexual penetration under section 376A(5) is also repealed. A defence will be provided for sexual penetration of a spouse below 16 years of age with the spouse's consent. However, this should be read with section 90(c) which provides that a person below 12 years of age cannot provide consent.

Clause 113 inserts a new section 376AA to create a new offence of exploitative penetrative sexual activity with a minor who is at least 16 but below 18 years of age. The new offence criminalises cases where penetrative sexual activity with minors at least 16 but below 18 years of age is obtained through exploitation.

Clause 114 amends section 376B(4) to extend the scope of the offence beyond sexual penetration to sexual touching.

Clause 115 amends section 376C(2) to extend the extra-territorial application of section 376B to more situations. The amendments do not substantively change the punishment, which does not involve mandatory imprisonment.

Clause 116 amends section 376E (Sexual grooming) so that the number of instances of prior contact is reduced from 2 to one, and the section is extended to cover the scenario where the minor travels to a meeting initiated or agreed to by the offender. The punishment for offences will be tiered with enhanced punishments for offences against minors below 14 years of age.

Clause 117 inserts new sections 376EA to 376EE.

The new section 376EA creates the new offence of exploitative sexual grooming of a minor who is at least 16 but not 18 years old. The offence is similar to section 376E but there is an additional requirement that the offender must be in an exploitative relationship with the minor.

The new section 376EB creates the new offence of sexual communication with a minor below 16 years of age. The offences in sections 376EB and 376ED do not apply to consensual communications between spouses.

The new section 376EC creates a new offence of exploitative sexual communication with a minor who is at least 16 but not 18 years old. The offence is similar to section 376EB but there is an additional requirement that the offender must be in an exploitative relationship with the minor.

The new section 376ED creates a new offence of engaging in sexual activity before a minor below 16 years of age, or causing a minor below 16 years of age to look at a sexual image. The offence in section 376ED does not apply to a consensual act by a person in relation to a minor who is his or her spouse.

The new section 376EE creates a new offence of engaging in sexual activity before a minor who is at least 16 but not 18 years old. The offence is similar to section 376ED but there is an additional requirement that the offender must be in an exploitative relationship with the minor.

Clause 118 amends section 376F (Procurement of sexual activity with person with mental disability) to abolish marital immunity for the offence, and to provide that for situations involving married couples, only consent for sexual activity obtained by threat or deception (but not inducement) would be criminalised. An amendment is made to also include situations where the offender incites or procures the victim to touch the offender's body or another person's body (including the victim's own body).

Clause 119 repeals and re-enacts section 376G (Incest) to exclude instances of non-consensual sexual penetration and instances of sexual penetration of minors below 16 years of age. Such conduct will constitute offences under other sections of the Code such as section 375 (Rape) and section 376 (Sexual assault by penetration). The section is also amended to make the elements gender-neutral. An explanation is also added to this section to clarify that the offence of incest will not apply to victims of the new exploitative penetrative sexual activity offence (new section 376AA).

The clause also inserts a new section 376H to create a new offence of procurement of sexual activity by deception or false representation relating to the use of a sexually protective device such as a contraceptive device or the presence of a sexually transmitted disease.

Clause 120 inserts new sections 377BA to 377BN.

The new section 377BA is a re-enactment of section 509 on insulting the modesty of a woman to locate this offence with other sexual offences and to make it gender-neutral so that it applies to men as well as women.

The new section 377BB introduces a new offence of voyeurism.

The new section 377BC introduces a new offence of distribution of voyeuristic images or recordings.

The new section 377BD introduces a new offence of possession of or gaining access to voyeuristic or intimate images or recordings.

The new section 377BE introduces a new offence of distributing or threatening to distribute intimate images or recordings of another person without consent, knowing or having reason to believe that it will or is likely to cause the victim humiliation, distress or alarm.

The new section 377BF introduces a new offence of sexual exposure of the offender's genitals for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification or of causing the victim humiliation, distress or alarm. It is also an offence for the offender to send an image of his or another person's genitals to the victim for this purpose.

The new section 377BG introduces a new offence of using or involving a child below 16 years of age in the production of child abuse material.

The new section 377BH introduces a new offence of producing child abuse material.

The new section 377BI introduces a new offence of distributing or selling child abuse material.

The new section 377BJ introduces a new offence of advertising or seeking child abuse material.

The new section 377BK introduces a new offence of possession of or gaining access to child abuse material.

The new section 377BL introduces a new offence of exploitation by abusive material of a minor who is at least 16 but not 18 years old where the offender and the minor are in an exploitative relationship.

The new section 377BM sets out certain defences to certain offences relating to intimate images or recordings and voyeurism.

The new section 377BN sets out certain defences to certain child abuse material offences.

Clause 121 repeals and re-enacts section 377C to insert several new definitions used in the new offences created.

Clause 121 also inserts new sections 377CA and 377CB.

The new section 377CA explains the meaning of “exploitative relationship” in the context of certain existing and new offences relating to sexual activities with minors. Whether an accused person’s relationship with a minor is exploitative is to be determined by the court in the circumstances of each case and the court must have regard to the factors listed in section 377CA(1) in making such determination. The persons who are in the relationships set out in section 377CA(2) will be presumed to be in an exploitative relationship with the minor. To avoid doubt, a person in a relationship set out in section 377CA(2) is not to be presumed as being in an exploitative relationship with a minor who is his or her spouse.

The new section 377CB clarifies that a misconception of fact can vitiate consent given to a sexual act if the misconception is directly related to —

- (a) the nature of the act, namely that it is not of a sexual nature;
- (b) the purpose of the act, namely that it is not for a sexual purpose; or
- (c) the identity of the person doing the act.

Clause 122 repeals and re-enacts section 377D to extend the limited defence of “reasonable mistake as to age” to apply to accused persons of all ages, where the minor victims are at least 16 years old. The defence is no longer available for victims who are younger than 16.

Clause 123 amends section 378 to include an Explanation that intangible or incorporeal property may be “moved” by being transferred from one account to another, transferring the interests in the property from one person to another person, or by extinguishing the property. An Illustration of dishonestly transferring money from one bank account to another is also added.

Clause 124 amends section 401 to update the archaic phrase “wandering gang of thieves”.

Clause 125 amends section 403 to insert an Illustration of dishonestly retaining and appropriating money which was mistakenly transferred to the offender’s bank account.

Clause 126 amends section 405 to replace the word “wilfully” with “intentionally”.

Clause 127 repeals and re-enacts section 407 to modernise the provision and apply it to persons entrusted with property for the purpose of transportation for hire or storage for rent or charge.

Clause 128 repeals and re-enacts sections 408 and 409.

The new section 408 replaces the archaic language of “clerk” and “servant” with the term “employee”. The amendment also defines “employee” to include a person who is engaged in a capacity with the same fundamental qualities as an employee and to clarify that a person may be an employee even though that person does not receive any salary or other remuneration.

The new section 409 rationalises the categories of relationships covered by the provision. In Public Prosecutor v Lam Leng Hung [2018] SGCA 7, the Court of Appeal decided that section 409 did not cover directors of corporations, governing board members or key officers of a charity, and officers of a society. Such persons committing criminal breach of trust would therefore have been punished instead under section 406 for criminal breach of trust simpliciter. The clause amends section 409 to apply the enhanced punishment to persons who are entrusted with property —

- (a) in his or her capacity as a public servant;
- (b) in the way of his or her trade, profession or business as a banker, a merchant, a factor, a broker, an attorney or an agent;
- (c) in his or her professional capacity (other than of a trade, profession or business mentioned in paragraph (b));
- (d) in his or her capacity as a director of a corporation;
- (e) in his or her capacity as an officer of an unincorporated association;
- (f) in his or her capacity as a partner in a partnership;
- (g) in his or her capacity as a key executive of a corporation, an unincorporated association or a partnership; or
- (h) in his or her capacity as a fiduciary.

The section will apply to a director of a corporation, officer of an unincorporated association, partner in a partnership, key executive of a corporation, unincorporated association or partnership even though that person did not receive any salary or other remuneration. The maximum punishment will also be reduced from life imprisonment to 20 years’ imprisonment.

Clause 129 inserts an Explanation to section 410 to clarify that in proving whether any property is “stolen property”, it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove the elements or particulars of any offence that caused or contributed to the property being “stolen property”.

Clause 130 amends section 411 to widen the fault element to knowledge or reason to believe that the property was “obtained in whole or in part through any criminal offence involving fraud or dishonesty”. The fault element of “dishonesty” is also removed. A defence of reasonable excuse is also introduced such that it would be a defence for a person charged with the offence to prove that he had a reasonable excuse to receive and retain the property, and that he exercised reasonable care as soon as practicable after having the knowledge or reason to believe mentioned.

Clause 131 amends section 412 to reduce the maximum punishment for dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of a gang-robbery from life imprisonment to 20 years' imprisonment. A defence of reasonable excuse is also introduced such that it would be a defence for a person charged with the offence to prove that he had a reasonable excuse to receive and retain the property, and that he exercised reasonable care as soon as practicable after having the knowledge or reason to believe mentioned.

Clause 132 amends section 413 to widen the fault element to knowledge or reason to believe that the property was "obtained in whole or in part through any criminal offence involving fraud or dishonesty".

Clause 133 amends section 414 to widen the fault element to knowledge or reason to believe that the property was "obtained in whole or in part through any criminal offence involving fraud or dishonesty".

Clause 134 amends section 415 to clarify that to constitute a physical element of the offence of cheating a person may be deceived "to cause the delivery" of any property to another person. The clause also inserts 2 Explanations to section 415 to clarify that corporate entities are capable of being deceived or induced to act in a certain manner for the purposes of the offence of cheating. This is possible even though none of its individual officers, employees or agents is personally deceived or induced.

Clause 135 inserts a new section 416A to create a new offence of illegally obtaining, retaining, supplying, transmitting or making available personal information of another person. The offence is similar in substance to section 8A of the Computer Misuse Act (Cap. 50A) (supplying, etc., personal information obtained in contravention of certain provisions) but is wider in that it is not restricted to personal information obtained through offences in the Computer Misuse Act such as computer hacking.

Clause 136 amends section 420 to clarify that to constitute a physical element of the offence of cheating and dishonestly inducing a delivery of property, a person may be deceived "to cause the delivery" of any property to another person. This amendment is similar to an amendment to section 415.

Clause 137 inserts a new section 420A to create a new offence of obtaining services fraudulently. It is an offence to fraudulently or dishonestly obtain a service knowing that it is being made available on a "for payment" basis, but nevertheless not intending that full payment be made. The inclusion of the 2 alternative fault elements of "fraudulently" and "dishonestly" is intended to ensure that the new offence requires the same states of mind currently required by the offence of cheating in section 415. This new offence will catch factual situations where the services fraudulently obtained do not fall within the definition of “property” or where there is no false representation made at the time the services are obtained.

Clause 138 inserts a new section 424A to create a new offence of fraud which is not directly connected with a contract for the supply of goods or services. This new offence will be committed when any person fraudulently or dishonestly, (a) makes a representation, (b) fails to disclose information which he is under a legal duty to disclose, or (c) abuses, whether by act or omission, a position he occupies in which he is expected to safeguard, or not to act against, the financial interests of another person. Unlike the offence of cheating in section 415, this new offence does not require that the accused person intended to cause a loss or gain and the victim was factually deceived and induced to do certain acts. The new offence focuses instead on the dishonest or fraudulent intent and acts of the accused person and not their effect on an alleged victim. The inclusion of the 2 alternative fault elements of “fraudulently” and “dishonestly” is intended to ensure that the new offence requires the same states of mind currently required by the offence of cheating in section 415.

Clause 139 inserts a new section 424B to create a new offence of fraud, which is similar to the new section 424A. The difference is that for this new offence the false representation, failure to disclose information or abuse of position must be directly connected with a contract for the supply of goods or services.

Clause 140 amends section 426 to increase the maximum punishment for the offence of mischief from one to 2 years’ imprisonment.

Clause 141 repeals and re-enacts section 427 to consolidate and simplify the various forms of the offence of mischief from sections 430 to 434 which will be repealed. The arbitrary and outdated quantum of $500 which distinguishes sections 426 and 427 is removed and the various forms of mischief in sections 430 to 434 replaced with a single offence with an enhanced punishment of 10 years’ imprisonment or fine or both. This enhanced punishment will be imposed on mischief which causes or which the accused person knows is likely to cause, a disruption to —

- (a) the provision of any key service (which is defined); or
- (b) the performance of any duty or function of, or the exercise of any power by the Government or a public agency.

Clause 142 repeals sections 430 to 434 on various permutations of the offence of mischief as explained above.

Clause 143 amends section 438 to remove the punishment of fine if the punishment imposed is life imprisonment.

Clause 144 amends section 442 to simplify the provisions relating to house-trespass by replacing the term “house-trespass” with the term “house-breaking” and to expand the section to cover a container used as a human dwelling.

Clause 145 repeals sections 443 to 446 to remove the distinctions between house-trespass, lurking house-trespass, lurking house-trespass by night, house-breaking and house-breaking by night. The provisions will be simplified with a single term of “house-breaking”. Criminal trespass in section 447 will however be retained.

Clause 146 repeals and re-enacts section 448 to replace the term “house-trespass” with “house-breaking” and to enhance the punishment.

Clause 147 amends section 449 to replace the term “house-trespass” with “house-breaking” and to increase the punishment to provide for appropriate sentences for serious cases which would fall within the current offence of house-breaking.

Clause 148 amends section 450 to replace the term “house-trespass” with “house-breaking” and to increase the punishment to provide for appropriate sentences for serious cases which would fall within the current offence of house-breaking.

Clause 149 amends section 451 to replace the term “house-trespass” with “house-breaking” and to increase the punishment to provide for appropriate sentences for serious cases which would fall within the current offence of house-breaking.

Clause 150 amends section 452 to replace the term “house-trespass” with “house-breaking” and to increase the punishment to provide for appropriate sentences for serious cases which would fall within the current offence of house-breaking.

Clause 151 repeals and re-enacts section 453 to provide for the offence of possession of house-breaking implements or offensive weapons. This offence is ported over from section 22 of the Miscellaneous Offences (Public Order and Nuisance) Act (Cap. 184).

Clause 152 repeals sections 454 to 458 to remove the distinctions between lurking house-trespass, lurking house-trespass by night, house-breaking and house-breaking by night. The provisions will be simplified with a single term of “house-breaking”.

Clause 153 makes a technical amendment to section 458A to change the cross-references.

Clause 154 amends section 459 to remove the term “lurking house-trespass”. The provision will be simplified with a single term of “house-breaking”.

Clause 155 amends section 460 to remove the term “lurking house-trespass by night” and “house-breaking by night” and simplify it with a single term of “house-breaking”.

Clause 156 makes a technical amendment to the heading of Chapter XVIII.

Clause 157 amends section 477A to replace the word “wilfully” with “intentionally” and to clarify that the documents, books, security or accounts altered or falsified by an employee include a set of such documents, books, security or accounts.

Clause 158 makes a technical amendment to the sub-heading of Chapter XVIII.

Clause 159 repeals and re-enacts section 489A to insert new definitions of “coin” and “currency”. The distinction between “coin” and “current coin” is removed and the definition of “currency” is adapted from the Currency Act (Cap. 69). The term “currency note” is changed to “currency”.

Clauses 160, 161 and 162 amend sections 489B, 489C and 489D, respectively, to change the term “currency note” to “currency”. The amendments will have the effect of combining offences relating to “coins” (including current coins) in Chapter XII with provisions relating to bank notes and currency in sections 489B, 489C and 489D.

Clause 163 inserts new sections 489E to 489I. The new section 489E clarifies that a person who in Singapore abets the counterfeiting of currency overseas will be punished in the same manner as if the counterfeiting had taken place in Singapore.

The new sections 489F to 489I will create new offences applicable to currency and coins which are similar to the offences relating to the alteration or counterfeiting of coins in Chapter XII which will be repealed.

Clause 164 repeals the whole of Chapter XX (Offences relating to marriage). The following sections in Chapter XX will be re-enacted with modifications in the Women’s Charter as they are more appropriately located in the Charter. See the related amendments to the Women’s Charter (see clause 189):

- (a) section 493 (Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage);
- (b) section 494 (Marrying again during the lifetime of husband or wife);
- (c) section 495 (Same offence with concealment of the former marriage from the person with whom subsequent marriage is contracted);
- (d) section 496 (Marriage ceremony gone through with fraudulent intent without lawful marriage).

Clause 165 amends section 506 to delete the words “or impute unchastity to a woman” as societal norms about the consequences of such imputation have evolved since this provision was first enacted, thus changing the need for enhanced punishment.

Clause 166 repeals sections 508 and 509. Section 508 (Act caused by inducing a person to believe that he will be rendered an object of divine displeasure) is repealed as it is no longer relevant in today's context.

Section 509 is repealed and re-enacted in section 377BA, with amendments to make the provision gender-neutral.

Clause 167 repeals and re-enacts section 511 with a new definition of criminal attempt with the following features:

- (a) the physical element is taking a substantial step towards the commission of the offence and a non-exhaustive list of examples of substantial steps is set out in the section;
- (b) the fault element is intention to commit the primary offence;
- (c) attempts to commit an offence which was impossible to commit fall within the scope of attempts.

Clause 167 also inserts a new section 512 to provide for the punishment for attempting to commit an offence where it is not provided in the Code or other legislation. The prescribed punishment for attempt will be generally equal to the prescribed punishment for the primary offence except where —

- (a) the punishment for the primary offence is death or life imprisonment;
- (b) the punishment for the primary offence is fixed by law, has a specified minimum or a mandatory minimum punishment; or
- (c) where there is express provision made in legislation for the punishment of attempts.

Clause 168 inserts a new schedule of offences (consisting mainly of important property and white-collar offences) under which the Singapore courts will have jurisdiction in accordance with the new section 4B.

PART 2

AMENDMENTS TO CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE

Part 2 amends the Criminal Procedure Code.

Clause 169 amends the Criminal Procedure Code by inserting a new section 303A which creates a new form of sentencing known as a presumptive minimum sentence. The court must pass no less than the minimum “default” sentence of imprisonment unless by reason of exceptional circumstances the court is satisfied that it would be unjust to impose on a first-time offender the presumptive minimum sentence. The clause also makes consequential and related amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code.

PART 3

AMENDMENTS TO OTHER ACTS

Part 3 (clauses 170 to 191) makes consequential and related amendments to certain other Acts.

- (b) section 12(2) of the Fisheries Act (Cap. 111);
- (c) sections 9(5), 36, 57(1) and 57B(1) of the Immigration Act (Cap. 133);
- (d) section 42(2) of the Passports Act (Cap. 220);

A police officer's reasonable belief that a person is doing or about to do an act which is dangerous to himself or herself is sufficient basis for the police officer's belief that the danger is attributable to a mental disorder. This will empower police officers to apprehend persons who are attempting to commit suicide, and refer them for medical assessment and treatment. Such empowerment is necessary as criminal investigation powers will no longer apply to these situations.

Clause 181 repeals subsections (1), (2) and (3) of section 22 of the Miscellaneous Offences (Public Order and Nuisance) Act as a consequential amendment to the re-enacted section 453 of the Penal Code on possession of house-breaking implements or offensive weapons. Clause 183 amends the Police Force Act by inserting new sections 26A to 26D to set out the powers of police officers and special police officers such as search and seizure in attempted suicide cases. These powers may be exercised where they are reasonably necessary to prevent personal injury or death to any person, facilitating a coroner's inquiry where death is caused or preserve evidence for any subsequent investigation into any suspected arrestable offence which may be disclosed. These powers are necessary as attempted suicide will no longer be an offence.

The offence of transmitting false or fabricated messages under section 45(b) is now caught by the new section 14D of the Miscellaneous Offences (Public Order and Nuisance) Act. The clause also makes a consequential amendment to section 60(3) of the Telecommunications Act.

Clause 188 makes consequential amendments to the First and Second Schedules to the United Nations Personnel Act (Cap. 339A).

Clause 189 amends the Women's Charter to insert a new section 6A which is a substantially similar provision as the repealed sections 494 (Marrying again during the lifetime of husband or wife) and 495 (Same offence with concealment of the former marriage from the person with whom subsequent marriage is contracted) of the Penal Code.
