EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

This Bill seeks to amend the Maintenance of Parents Act 1995 (the Act) mainly to —

- (a) create additional requirements where the parent in need of maintenance has a record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of the child from whom maintenance is being sought;
- (b) empower the Tribunal for the Maintenance of Parents (the Tribunal) to give certain directions when making a maintenance order;
- (c) deal with frivolous or vexatious applications under the Act;
- (d) facilitate conciliations for the maintenance of destitute persons;
- (e) expand the power of the Tribunal and the Commissioner for the Maintenance of Parents (the Commissioner) to obtain and use information; and
- (f) exclude minors from the Act.

Clause 1 relates to the short title and commencement.

Clause 2 amends the definition of “child” in section 2 to state that the Act only applies to a child who is of or above 21 years of age. The clause also introduces definitions of certain expressions used in the Bill.

Clause 3 amends section 3 to provide that the Tribunal may dismiss a frivolous or vexatious application, or an application that is non-compliant, without informing or involving the respondent to the application, and to make certain consequential amendments.

Clause 4 inserts new sections 3A and 3B.

The new section 3A introduces the requirement for a declaration to be made (when a claim is referred to the Commissioner under section 3(3) for the maintenance of a parent by a child (maintenance claim)) on whether the parent has any record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of the child.

The Minister will specify in subsidiary legislation as to what constitutes a record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect.

The new section 3B mainly prohibits the making of an application under section 3 for the maintenance of the parent by the child if the parent has any record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of the child, unless permission is obtained (from the Tribunal, or the president or a deputy president of the Tribunal) under the new section 3B to make the application.

Clause 5 amends section 4 to make an editorial amendment.

Clause 6 amends section 5 to make certain editorial amendments.

Clause 7 amends section 6 mainly to empower the Tribunal, when making a maintenance order, to give certain directions and to order that the payment of maintenance is subject to the parent or the applicant (or, in the case where the applicant is the parent, a related person as defined in that section) complying with a direction.

Clause 8 amends section 7 to make certain editorial amendments.

Clause 9 amends section 8 mainly to provide for the variation or rescission of a maintenance order when the parent has a record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of the child, the variation or rescission of a direction given under the new section 6(5) and an order made under the new section 6(8), and the dismissal of a frivolous or vexatious application made under section 8(2).

Clause 10 makes certain editorial amendments to section 11.

Clause 11 amends section 12 mainly to clarify that the Tribunal may, in deciding whether to give a direction under the new section 6(5) or order costs in the matter, take into account a person’s failure to attend any conciliation session mentioned in section 12(7).

Clause 12 inserts new sections 12A, 12B and 12C.

The new section 12A mainly prohibits the referral of a maintenance claim for conciliation under section 12(5)(b), or the continuation of the conciliation, if the parent has any record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of the child, unless permission is granted under the new section 3B for an application to be made under section 3 for the maintenance of the parent by the child.

The new section 12B provides that the Commissioner may invite a destitute person, the destitute person's child and any other relevant person for conciliation, with a view to reaching an agreement with the child for the maintenance of the destitute person, if certain conditions are met. If a person does not attend any conciliation session, this may be taken into account by the Tribunal (in the event an application for maintenance of the destitute person is subsequently made), in deciding whether to give a direction under the new section 6(5) or order costs in the matter.

The new section 12C deals with the privacy of any conciliation or mediation conducted under the Act, and precludes legal representation at the conciliation or mediation.

Clause 13 amends section 13(12) to make a change in nomenclature.

Clause 14 amends section 14 mainly to enable the Tribunal to dismiss a frivolous or vexatious application without informing or involving the respondent.

Clause 15 amends section 14A to expand the categories of persons (prescribed officers) from whom the Tribunal or the Commissioner may obtain information and the purposes for which the Tribunal or the Commissioner may use the information.

The clause also enables the Tribunal or the Commissioner to obtain (despite any court order or written law prohibiting the publication of information to protect the identity of a person (protected information)) from a prescribed officer protected information but is allowed to do so only for the purpose of ascertaining whether a parent has any record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of a child of the parent. The clause correspondingly states that a prescribed officer who provides the protected information to the Tribunal or the Commissioner does not contravene the court order or written law if the protected information is provided only for that purpose.

The new section 14A(7) defines a prescribed officer.

Where the Tribunal or the Commissioner obtains any protected information, the new section 14A(4) limits further disclosure of the protected information only to certain persons and only to the extent necessary to show that a parent has a record or purported record of abandonment, abuse or neglect of a child of the parent and the date of the record.

Before making further disclosure of the protected information to a person (the recipient) under the new section 14A(4), a member of the Tribunal or the Commissioner must inform the recipient that the information is protected information and that the recipient must not disclose the information (or any part of it), or do any other act, in contravention of the court order or written law applicable to the protected information. Where the recipient is a court, the member or the Commissioner is not required to inform the court of the latter.

Where a member of the Tribunal or the Commissioner makes further disclosure of the protected information in accordance with the new section 14A(4), he or she does not contravene the court order or written law applicable to the protected information.

Clause 16 amends section 18 mainly to provide that where an appeal is made against the Tribunal's refusal of permission under the new section 3B, service of the appeal papers on the respondent is dispensed with, and the appeal must be heard and determined without informing or involving the respondent, unless the General Division of the High Court directs otherwise.

Clause 17 replaces section 20A mainly to expand the current section (on protection of the members of the Tribunal, the Commissioner, etc., from personal liability) to include mediators, conciliation officers and certain persons acting under the Commissioner's directions.

Clause 18 amends section 21(2) to enable rules to be made for regulating and prescribing the procedure for appeals to the Tribunal, and to make an editorial amendment.

Clause 19 empowers the Minister to make regulations on saving and transitional provisions for any provision in the Bill.
